Flying Fare, $18.60.
Another Woman Scorned.
No Book Bonfire.
The Fanatic's Grip.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1927).

WHILE we talk about flying commercially, and about the possibility of cheap flying, Britishers fly from London to Paris for $18.60.

In 1919 the flying fare was $100. How many long-distance passengers will railroads and steamships carry, when real flying days come, across this continent, or across the ocean, in 10 hours, fare about $2 an hour, $20 to Europe?

MEN can't realize it, but it is dangerous to trifle with the wrong young lady.

Irene Johnson, young, energetic and colored, handed a bill to her taxi driver and an automatic pistol to the police sergeant. "Here's my gat," said she, "I've just killed my boy."

"HER BOY" is, or was before he acted foolishly, a Pullman car porter. He called on Irene, bringing four other young ladies with him, and met the "gat."

Wherever he has gone now, that "boy" will tell the inhabitants, "that's all true about Hell having no fury like a woman scorned."

MAYOR THOMPSON, of Chicago, wise man up with the times, never ordered any bonfire to be made of books that he did not like. That was the idea of Chicago's Public Library Administrator, Mr. Herman, who has been a stage hand and has an eye for the dramatic. There will be no medieval burning of books or their writers while Thompson is mayor.

FOUR French hostages, captured by Arabs, are held in a mud blockhouse, heavily chained and in the power of a powerful Sheik named Temga, known as a "Terrible Fanatic." In his eyes to chain, then kill anybody that does not believe in the Prophet is the shortest road to paradise.

Heaven help anybody in the hands of a fanatic, Mohammedan, Christian or other. The only difference between them is that one is a little more blood thirsty than the other.

ROTHERMERE, most powerful man in England because he owns the most powerful newspapers, demands Lloyd George return to power.

Britain is excited about this, and about Rothermere's statement that Lloyd George is the man to hold Socialism in check.

Many of Britain's "great men" will seem small, when history compares them with Lloyd George. He financed the war, supplied the ammunition, and then, with Clemenceau, he won the war. Now Britain needs him to pull the country out of the post-war slough of industrial despond.

ONCE more you are warned, be cautious about selling anything short in America. Some that sold General Motors short recently had their little fingers pinched yesterday when "G. M." hopped up over three points.

It will hop higher today, probably, when the world learns that the company in the last three months has earned more than $64,000,000. (Sixty-four million). That means earnings at the rate of more than $14 a share on the new stock, selling at about $128.

We warn you, don't gamble; and more earnestly we warn you, don't sell this country short.

COTTON jumped up more than two dollars a bale yesterday. Steel stock went up, money was cheap. You could borrow at 3½ per cent for speculation. Altogether it was pleasant for brokers, whose seats are now worth a quarter of a million apiece. You could buy one for $25,000 not long ago.

A KILLING that will puzzle the jury comes from McHenry county in Illinois. The police announce that William Schumacher, 28, was innocent of the charge that he had killed his father. Schumacher told them "you are wrong. I waited for him to come into the barn, pulled the trigger, and the shot almost blew his head off."

His father made him work before and after school when he was 9 years old, took him out of school for good when he was 12, and made him do a man's work. He beat the boy's mother, repeatedly, knocked her into a hot stove and left her there, drove a pitchfork into the leg of a younger brother, so far that the boy could not pull it out without help.

Just before the murder he knocked his wife to the floor with a blow on the chin, accusing her of infidelity, saying a farmhand

MISSING VICE CRUSADER FACES DIVORCE SUIT

William L. King, executive secretary of the Citizens League, apparently is through—not only as a vice crusader, but as a husband.

He has disappeared from Pittsburgh, and Rev. J. Alvin Orr, president of the league, frankly admits he does not know where King is and doubts if he will return. Scores of cases against alleged proprietors of girl, gambling and liquor dens, in which King is prosecutor, are pending in Federal and Common Pleas courts.

Mrs. King, according to a letter received from her by the Rev. Orr, has been in Reno, Nev., making arrangements for a divorce.

That King's tenure with the league, from which he has received no pay since October 1, is fast drawing to a close was indicated today when Dr. Orr said:

"There is no disposition on the part of the league to cover up Mr. King in anything that may have been wrong.

"Unless King can clear himself of embarrassments, as well as actual guilt in wrongdoing, his services here are no longer needed or desired.

"I believe he went away the last time undecided whether he would return or not."

Dr. Orr's admission that the vice crusade secretary may not return to Pittsburgh means—should King remain away—complete collapse of the league cases pending before the courts.

SHADY WORK HINTED

King's first disappearance came like a bolt from the sky.

With him, according to Jakie Klein, underworld character and gambler, went $22,500 of good, if not hard-earned, underworld money.

Klein turned over to police evidence he said King gave him in exchange for the $22,500. The evidence proved to be nothing more than addresses of a hundred or more dives closed by city police and county detectives prior to King's coming.

At the same time, letters announcing King's resignation and signed by him were received by the league officials and by the newspapers.

King, sought by both league and police heads as a result of Klein's

Evidence Gone With King

Great doubt existing as to the whereabouts or even the existence of evidence that will be necessary in the prosecution of the scores of cases of the Citizens' League of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County when the cases are called in Criminal Court next month, today grew in the minds of the officials of that organization and others concerned in the prosecution.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner admitted that neither he nor the county custodian of evidence have a particle of evidence that is to be used in the prosecution. The evidence, he said, was left in the custody of William L. King, missing director of the league, although this is unusual and not according to the policy of the county courts.

The county custodian of evidence, Theodore Seidenstricker, had repeatedly asked Mr. King for the evidence, so that he could list it according to the trials that are to be brought up. Nothing ever was turned over to Mr. Seidenstricker, Mr. Gardner said.

The only place the evidence might

SINCLAIR RIVALS CHARGE "FREEZE-OUT" BY FALL

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall made a freeze-out proposition of his deal to lease the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve to Harry F. Sinclair, according to testimony of witnesses today at the conspiracy trial of the two men indicted.

So secretly did he negotiate that Birch Helms, of the Texas Pacific Coal and Gas Company, came to him three days after the Sinclair lease was signed seeking to bid on Teapot Dome. The secretary said he would be glad to entertain a proposition, suggesting it be submitted to him at his New Mexico ranch. Fall went to the ranch and wired Helms "Teapot Dome is closed," after the oil man had read it in the paper.

GET "RUN-AROUND"

In another instance, just a month before the Sinclair lease was signed, Fall told Frank Kistler, of the Producers and Refiners' Corporation of Wyoming, he "wasn't considering leasing Teapot Dome," but would let the oil man know if he "did decide to do so." The next Kistler heard of Teapot Dome was when he read in the papers that Sinclair had leased it.

To A. Beaty of the Texas Oil Company, Fall admitted he had received a satisfactory proposition from Sinclair and didn't care to hear any others. This was a week before the lease was signed. In Beaty's case,

DISOBEDIENT GIRL IS SHOT

WALL STREET CLOSE

FATHER USES GUN

Because his 14-year-old daughter disobeyed and went to a motion picture show, Braddock police say, Frank Derigji shot her on the doorstep of their home, 519 Center street, Braddock, last night.

The girl, Theresa, is in the Braddock General Hospital suffering from a bullet wound in her right leg. Her father is in hiding from police, and from his wife, Mrs. Thelma Derigji, six-foot woman, who promises to avenge her daughter the minute her husband returns. He fled after the shooting.

According to police, the girl's father had taken a dislike to boys who took his daughter automobiling. Before leaving his home last night he issued strict orders to his wife forbidding Theresa to leave the house.

Mother's aren't as strict as fathers, so shortly after her father departed, Theresa left, saying that she

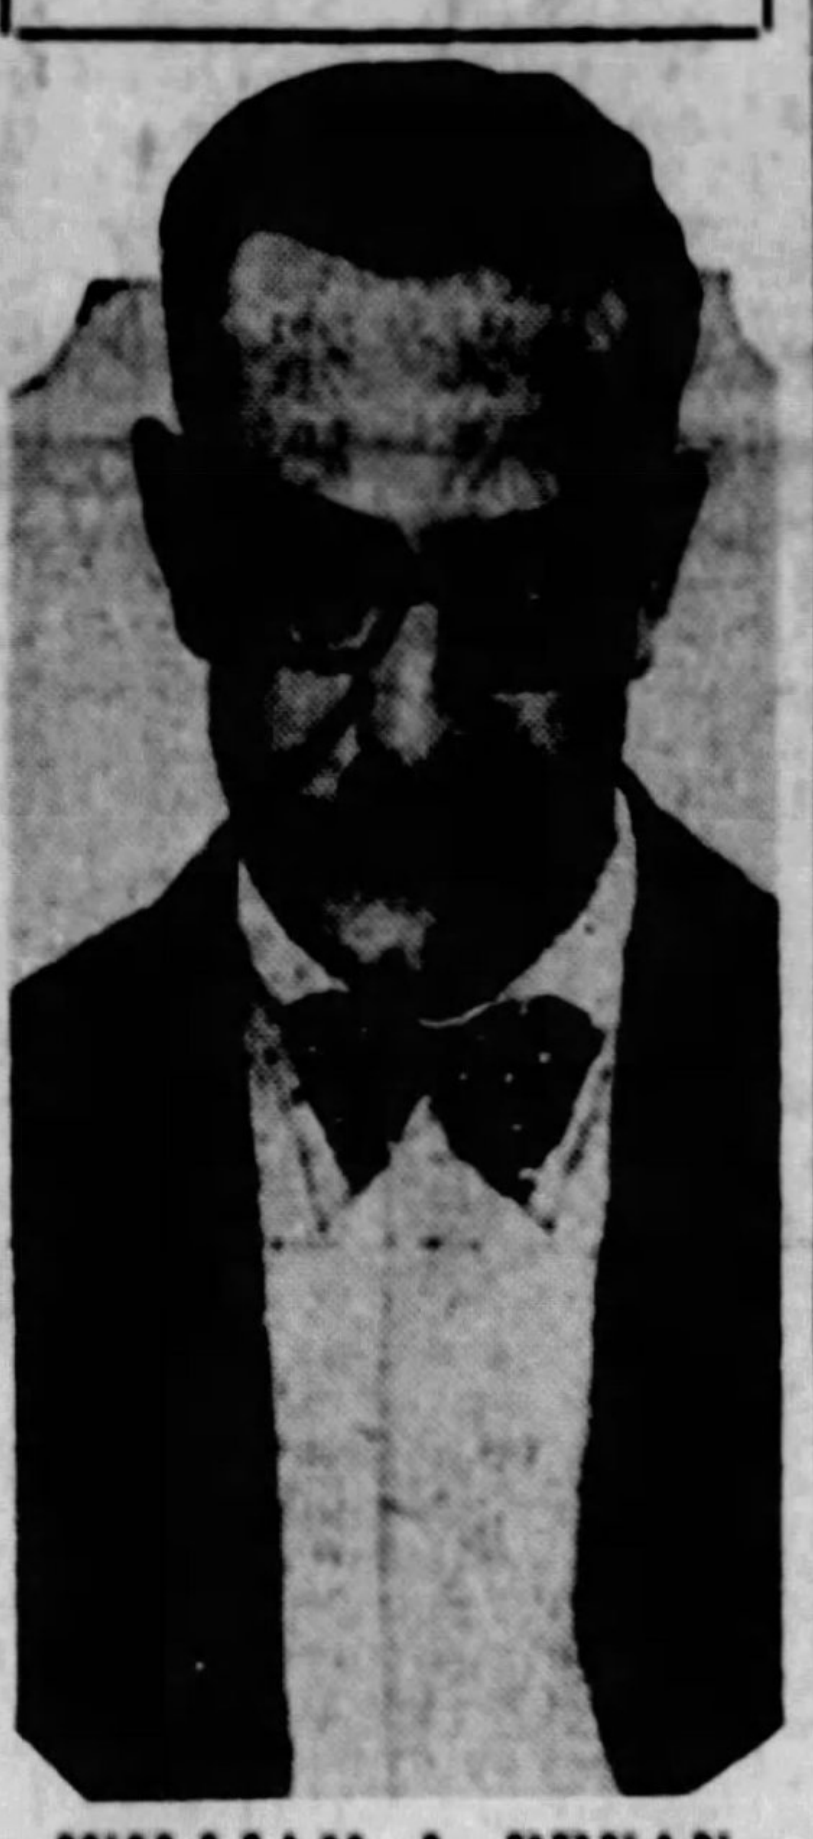
Art Wins



WILLIAM J. BRYAN

Artistic aspirations were charged with being the cause of a divorce granted to William J. Bryan, Los Angeles lawyer and son of the noted Commoner. On the testimony that his wife had refused to live with him and that of a former governess that Mrs. Bryan had chosen a musical career in preference to family life, the attorney was granted an interlocutory decree of separation. "Mrs. Bryan felt that her musical career made it impossible for her to devote her time to household duties," the governess testified.

Career Wrecker?

MRS. WILLIAM L. KING

Mr. and Mrs. William L. King didn't agree on the matter of career. At least that is what Mrs. King told Rev. J. Alvin Orr, president of the Citizens League, in a letter written from Reno, Nev., Oct. 12. She was in Reno, the letter said, arranging a divorce, as her husband felt she was ruining his career in Pittsburgh. Her husband, in case you don't recall, ran a vice crusade for the Citizens League a few months back before he became entangled with Jakie Klein, underworld character, and made a sudden airplane flight west.

RUTH HAS FLU

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Ruth Elder, American aviatrix, is suffering from influenza and has taken to bed. She is in need of complete rest, and her departure from Lisbon for Madrid, en route to Paris, has been postponed indefinitely.

It was stated that the American girl, who arrived here only yesterday from Horta, where she had been taken after the forced descent of her plane, the American Girl, in the sea, had passed a bad night and complained of pains in her chest.

The welcome given the American girl upon her arrival here was one of the biggest and most sensational Lisbon has ever known. While harbor craft swarmed about the Limh, airplanes circled overhead.

FIX SHIP DEAD AT 34

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Only 34 of the 1,258 persons aboard the steamship Principessa Mafelda were missing late today, said a message received here by the local agency of the Navigazione Generale Italiana.

The total rescued was given as 1,224 in this message, with the quota of saved of the various rescue steamships as follows: Formose, 450; Athena, 450; Empire Star, 202; Rosetti, 122.

(The Rosetti has not been mentioned in previous dispatches, which included 300 rescues by the British steamship Avalona, the variation in the number saved by the above ships with previous dispatches may be due to the transferring of rescued passengers from the various rescue ships.)

EXACT TOLL UNKNOWN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 26.—Hours after the Italian liner Principessa Mafalda went down to her fate in a calm sea off Bahia last night the death toll today was still shrouded in mystery by a babel of conflicting radio reports.

CAUSE MYSTERIOUS

Mystery cloaks the cause as well as the extent of the disaster. It was generally believed at first that the Principessa Mafalda had gone down after striking a reef. Later advices indicate that the accident occurred when a propeller shaft broke and water rushed into the hold causing the boilers to explode.

Naval officials today told the International News Service that, according to their advices, the explosion aboard the Italian liner occurred at 6:30 o'clock last night and that the vessel did not finally go down until 12:35 a. m. today.

Notwithstanding the tumult aboard the sinking ship, there should have been ample time for rescue work naval officials said, and they believe the list of those lost to be far below the original estimates.

The steamer Formosa arrived on the scene of the disaster at 9 o'clock apparently while the sinking liner was still afloat, and was able to effect a large number of rescues.

The steamer Voltaire of the Lamport & Holt Line and the Altona are also reported to have effected some rescues.

The Formosa and other boats arriving on the scene of the disaster did not have sufficient equipment to

BLOOMFIELD BOX PLANT SWEPT BY FLAMES

Flames shot from the third floor of the plant of the Fuller Label and Box Company, 444-6-8 Dargan street, in a spectacular fire which started shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. The Bloomfield bridge, under which the plant, a three-story building, is located, furnished a vantage point for thousands of spectators to see the fire.

LEAPS 35 FEET TO KILL HIMSELF; BREAKS BACK

SOMERSET, Pa., Oct. 26.—The death he sought is coming through miserable hours of suffering to Tony Paoli, 35, miner, father of five small children, who, suffering from ill health, yesterday leaped from the topmost limb of a 35-foot tree. His back was broken. This and internal injuries will cause his death, surgeons say.

OUSTED PASTOR DEFIES MISSION SOCIETY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 26.—"I don't care what action the missionary society takes; I will remain pastor of the Tower Hill Church."

This statement by the Rev. Andrew B. Lemke, 28, Bethany College graduate and for several months pastor of the Tower Hill Christian Church coke region mission near here, was taken to indicate that legal action may result from the situation which arose, it is said, over attempts by the pastor to receive unimmersed persons into membership against the traditional practice of the Disciples of Christ or Christian Church.

At a congregational meeting Sunday a majority of the membership voted to approve the action of the official board of the Tower Hill Church in asking the Rev. Lemke's resignation. Thirteen persons walked out without voting and several who remained did not vote, according to officers of the church.

At a convention recently held in Butler, Pa., a resolution was passed by a committee of the Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society, under whose auspices the Tower Hill Church is conducted, dismissing the Rev. Lemke. The latter, it is said, denied the authority of the committee to discharge him.

The difficulty started, according to the Rev. Joel Lee Jones, of Uniontown, a member of the committee, when the Rev. Lemke read a list of prospective members and asked that they be admitted without baptism. In event the Tower Hill pastor attempts to assume the pulpit next Sunday, it was said today court action is likely.

was going to attend a film show. She returned late and found her father waiting to receive her. During the argument that followed Theresa vowed she would leave home to make her home with her married sister.

Her father left the room and returned a moment later with a large revolver, with which he threatened his daughter. Theresa was not afraid. She opened the door and, with a parting taunt at her father, left the house.

The bark of a revolver followed and Theresa dropped just outside the door. The mother rushed to her daughter and Derigji fled to avoid his wife's wrath. The girl was removed to the hospital with a bullet wound in her left leg. Her condition is not serious.

Today

was the real father of the 21-year-old son.

That son killed him. The neighbors corroborate the story of cruelty.

It will not be easy to get a conviction in that case.

AFTER all the talk about "extravagant women" you will be interested in this fact, provided by the United States Department of Labor: Men, on the average, spend more for their clothes than women. The average for husbands is $71.28; for wives, $63.55.

Women are the economical half of the household, making ends meet, denying themselves for the children and the future. Not to know it is not to know women or men.

FOUR thousand miners in Colorado struck, under orders of the I. W. W. Miners may do as they please with their working hands, and use their judgment about striking.

But coal workers and owners should remember one thing.

Oil is taking the place of coal for steamships, locomotives, heating plants and engines of highest efficiency. Oil spouts from the ground, you need not mine it. Oil flows through pipes, needs no stoker, feeds itself to supply power. Coal once dropped for oil is not taken back again.

ALL that is no reason why mine owners should oppress their men, or why workers should submit to injustice. But it is a reason for earnest thinking.

Shot Drops Chicken Thief

Shot as a chicken thief, Andrew Tomolski, 58, of 2828 Penn avenue, is in the Homeopathic Hospital. He was felled by a bullet fired by H. G. Dixon, a Negro, of 7445 Hermitage street, early this morning after Dixon had discovered a thief in the chicken coop in the rear of his home.

Dixon told police that squawks from his chicken yard aroused him and when he investigated he found two chickens dead and Tomolski in the act of killing a third. Dixon fired as Tomolski ran. A bullet struck one of Tomolski's knees and he collapsed.

SINCLAIR RIVALS CHARGE

Owen J. Roberts, chief prosecutor, brought out testimony which indicated that had Fall been willing to listen, the Texas Oil Company might have considered building the 1,000-mile pipe line and the storage tanks which Sinclair built. The defense has contended no other concern would have undertaken a proposition of that magnitude.

Helms called on Fall about leasing Teapot Dome in April, 1922.

STALLED OFF, HELM CLAIMS

Fall told him, the witness declared, he would be very glad to entertain a bid, but he was leaving town for his New Mexico ranch, but would be glad to confer with officials of Helms' company there.

Helms then read in the papers that Sinclair had obtained the lease and wired Fall asking about it and repeating his request for the New Mexico conference.

On April 20, 1922, Fall replied, saying he "regretted can't make appointment on this trip. Teapot Dome closed."

Roberts then startled the court room by fixing the date of Helms' visit to Fall as April 10—three days after Sinclair had signed the lease.

John C. Shaffer, Chicago publisher, testified he had sought a lease of 600 acres of Teapot Dome and he started after it as early as May 11, 1921, writing to both Secretary of the Navy Danby and Assistant Secretary of Interior Finney.

On June 1, 1921, Fall wrote Shaffer stating there was no development in Teapot Dome and the Navy wanted it kept closed.

RUTH TO HOP TO MADRID

wonderful people was thoroughly enjoyed.

They are Irish, and when one has said that one has said enough. Kindhearted, hospitable, jolly and gay, always smiling, forever in a good humor, they are the kind of people I love.

The first morning we spent in sending messages to our friends back home through Mr. Mackey, who is the Western Union representative. We were brought back to Mr. and Mrs. Mackey's home, located on a hilltop overlooking the bay, which is a most beautiful and restful scene. One would love to spend a long vacation there with nothing to do except to enjoy the beautiful scenery.

All over the mountainside you find wonderful flowers growing wild. Flowers for which we pay dearly at home grow in abundance.

We had lunch, then retired to our rooms for a quiet siesta. Later we were escorted to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Skey. He is the British consul. We had tea in their lovely home and met their charming daughter, Audrey.

The tea over, we returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mackey, where a delightful dinner was served us. Some of their friends called after the meal, so we spent a pleasant evening together. After they had gone, we retired for the night to sleep and forget the memories of the dreadful storm that had almost worsted us, and our failure to reach Paris.

The next morning, after having had breakfast, we were delighted to meet Frau Lilli Dillenz and the crew of the German Junker plane. They were waiting for favorable weather to continue their flight to New York.

It is rather a singular coincident for two women who are hoping to be the first of their sex to cross the Atlantic by air to meet in the Azores; we with only six hundred miles to go but with my plane destroyed and left resting at the bottom of the sea, she with her three-motored plane accompanied by four men and the big hop ahead.

It was an extremely pleasant experience and I shall never forget Frau Dillenz; such a sweet, charming girl and with such courage, for surely she must realize the hazardous task she is attempting at this time of the year.

I think we all realize the chance this brave girl is taking. At all times it is more dangerous to cross the Atlantic from east to west, but more so at this late time of the year.

My prayers and hopes go with her and I feel that she will make it or that at least she will be safe, even though the odds are against her.

George and the German aviators held quite a lengthy conversation about trans-Atlantic aerial navigation and the difficulties to be encountered.

More guests were invited in for tea, but after they had gone George and I had a few moments to ourselves. We used them to write more of our experiences in our diary.

After dinner Mr. and Mrs. Mackey entertained us at an American and English gathering at their home. It turned out to be an elaborate affair with music and dancing, which we enjoyed throughout the evening.

EVIDENCE GONE WITH KING

be found is in a safety deposit vault which Mr. King had rented in a downtown bank. This vault was taken out in the name of Mr. King as director of the league, and although a key to the box is in the possession of the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr, president of the board of directors, he is without authority to open the box.

Attempts were being made this afternoon by Dr. Orr to have Attorney Ralph H. Smith, counsel for the league, obtain a court order permitting the league officers to open the box and determine for themselves whether any evidence exists. Dr. Orr said Mr. King had told him and other members of the official board on several occasions that the evidence, carefully listed and ready for presentation in court, was safe in the vault.

District Attorney Gardner said that even if Mr. King did not return it would not mean that the cases would be lost. Mr. King made most of the informations against the violators on information received from his investigators and as long as the investigators were present the cases could be presented. Only in one or two cases in Common Pleas Court would it be imperative that Mr. King testify.

The only way that Mr. King could be forced to return to Pittsburgh would be for some of the defendants in the cases to make information against him for false arrest when he would then be brought back here to face trial, Gardner said.

The absence of Mr. King would in no way affect the charges that were made by the Federal prohibition officers who co-operated with Mr. King in making raids here, it was said. Investigators for the Citizens' League made affidavits before the United States commissioner and the prohibition enforcement agents made the arrests on what they found in the places and most of the charges against violators arrested by the agents are those of possession of liquor.

The agents secured their own evidence and it, when produced in court and with the testimony of the raiding officers, will be sufficient.

SHIP DEATH TOLL 34

effect immediate rescues of all those who had gone over the side of the Principessa Mafalda.

The Formosa's boats made continual trips, picking up survivors and then returning to search the seas again.

MOSTLY IMMIGRANTS

There were but 52 first-class passengers, as most of those on the ship were immigrants bound for South America. Among the first-class passengers were Prof. Gigli, director of the Rome Institute of Statistics, and the sister of Signor De Soledo, ambassador from the Argentine to France.

The wreck is believed to have occurred at about 6:30 last evening, Brazilian time.

The Principessa Mafalda was commanded by Simone Cugli and the first officer was Carlo Lugobardi, both of whom have been in the Italian marine for a long time.

Navigators here believe from the position given as that at which the ship sunk that the vessel may have gone on the "Abrolhos" ledge, which is off the Bahian coast.

The captain of the Formosa, a freight steamer, has reported by radio that he arrived at the scene of the wreck one hour after the Principessa Mafalda began to sink and that during the night he scoured the sea for survivors, picking up many from boats and rafts and some who were keeping afloat with life-preservers.

The Formosa will arrive in Rio Janeiro tomorrow.

Bell Plea Delayed Again

HARRISBURG, Oct. 26.—(INS.)—The pardon appeal of John A. Bell, aged Carnegie embezzler, was continued at a meeting of the Pardon Board here today.

Absence of Attorney General Thomas J. Baldridge, fourth member of the board, caused the delay.

The continuance means that the case will not be heard at this session of the board and possibly will come up at the November meeting.

Homer N. Young, who, as special deputy attorney general, conducted the state's case in investigation of methods of surety bonding after the collapse of the Carnegie Trust Company, was here to oppose the Bell application.

Young, who would not say whom he represented, also was called into the conference, which resulted in postponing the case until November. The office of District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, Allegheny county, did not have a representative for the hearing.

counter-charges, suddenly appeared in Iowa after an all-night airplane ride and married Machel Carr, characterized as an "old sweetheart."

They returned and King denied receiving the $22,500. He said it was only $500.

League officials, despite King's admission, reinstated him and issued statements expressing fullest confidence in him.

Now he has gone again.

The wife who so suddenly appeared has as suddenly disappeared. She left Pittsburgh several weeks before her husband.

From Reno, on October 12, Rev. Orr said he received the letter from Mrs. King in which she said she was going to divorce her husband.

In the letter Mrs. King told Rev. Orr her husband had accused her of ruining his career.

Dr. Orr said today the records and finances of the league are intact and that no stigma is attached so far to King's disappearance. He was admittedly worried, however, as to the outcome of the league cases with the executive secretary missing.

FIND REMUS DEPOSIT BOX

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—The discovery of a safety deposit box was announced here by Harry F. Pritzker, attorney for George B. Remus, former bootleg king and lawyer, held at Cincinnati for the slaying of his wife.

The deposit box is at the Rogers Park National Bank here in the name of the slain wife, Mrs. Imogene Holmes Remus.

The Chicago attorney for Remus also announced he had unearthed a cache of $3,500 belonging to the dead woman, but he would not reveal the hiding place.

Steps to open the safety deposit box at the Rogers Park National Bank would be taken, the attorney here added, as soon as the estate has been probated.

Meanwhile word from Lansing, Mich., came to the effect that the safety deposit box which Franklin L. Dodge, former prohibition ace of Chicago and alleged sweetheart of Mrs. Remus, had rented, was opened in the presence of counsel for both the state of Ohio and Remus.

It was found to be empty.

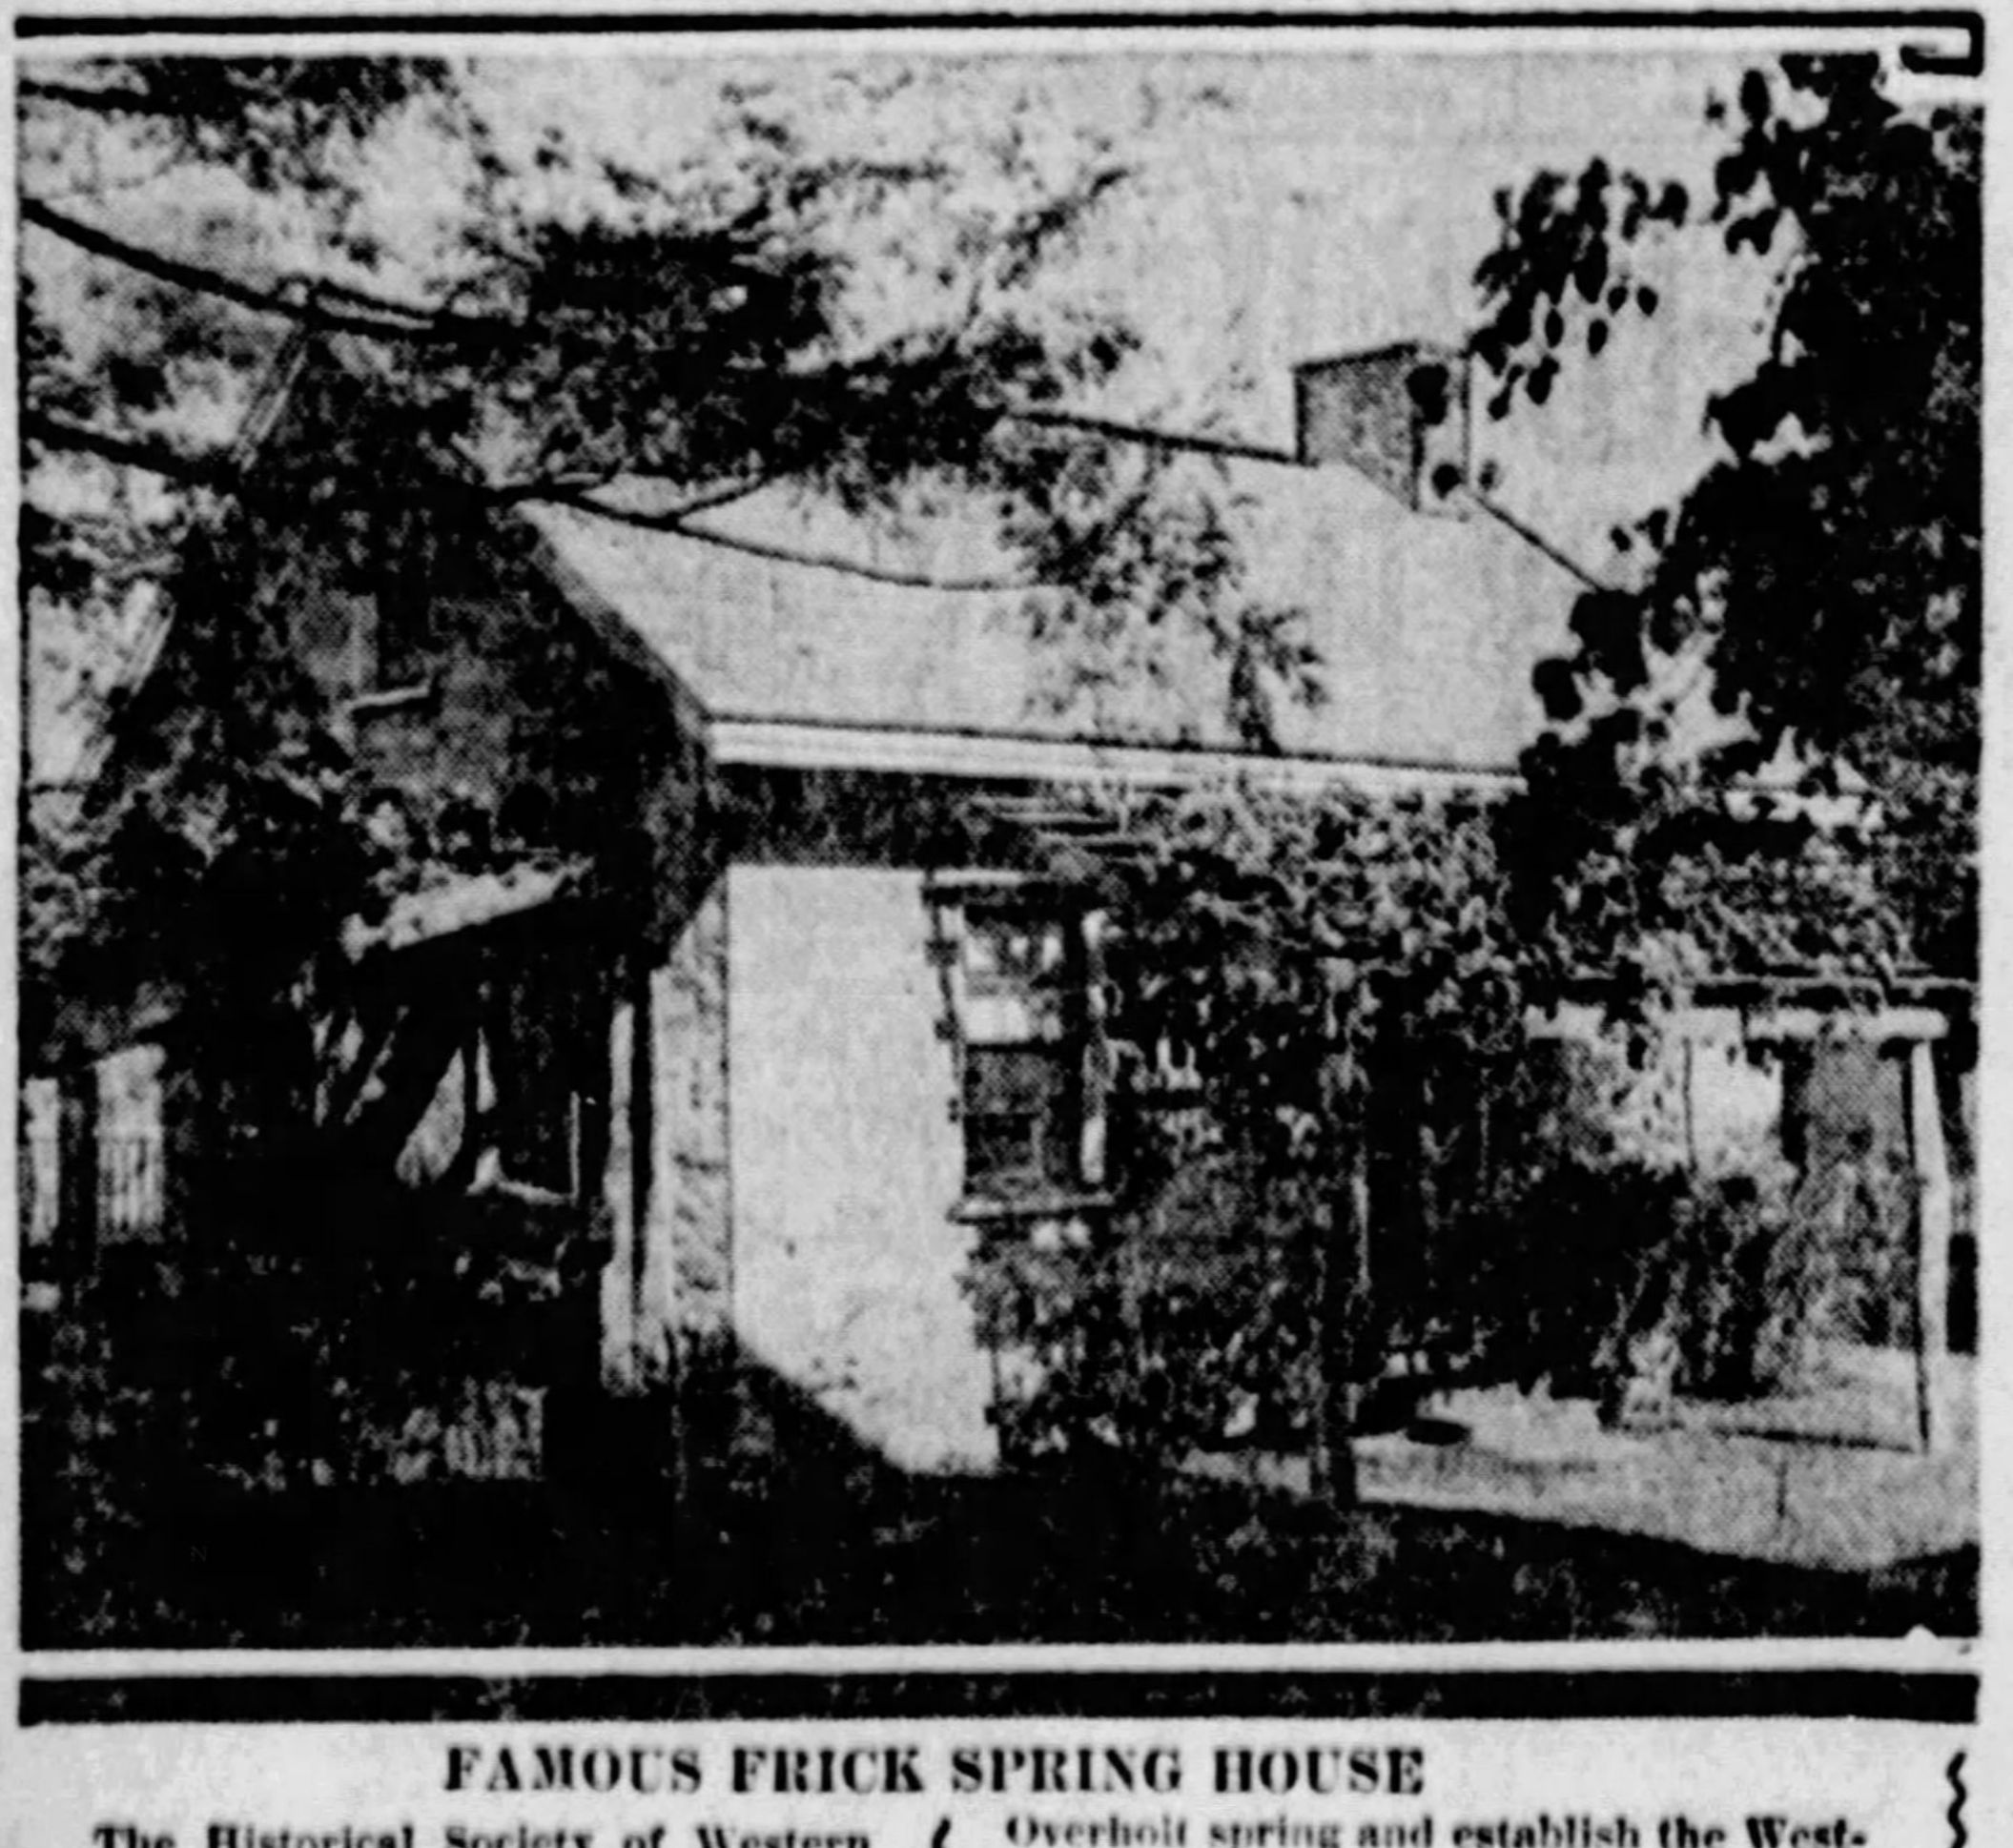
The discovery tallied with the records of J. Edward Roe, bank cashier. He said that Dodge had never opened the box since he rented it on May 3, 1926.

Miss Freda Schneider, a custodian of the safety deposit vault, testified that Dodge previous to May 3, 1926, had rented a box in the old vault, and when this vault was dismantled, had rented the new deposit box.

SAYS BAD CHECK GIVEN BROTHER WAS FOR RUM

L. D. Campbell, of 2200 Tustin street, charged with a misdemeanor for passing a worthless check, testified in Criminal Court that on June 14 he had given a check for $130 to his brother, Thomas Campbell, of 6101 Broad street, the prosecutor, for a case of liquor, with an understanding that the check would not be cashed, and subsequently paid for the case by a check for $125 and $5 cash. A jury yesterday brought in a verdict of not guilty but pay the costs. A record was made of the testimony.

Frick's Birthplace :-: In Spring House :-: Becomes Memorial



FAMOUS FRICK SPRING HOUSE

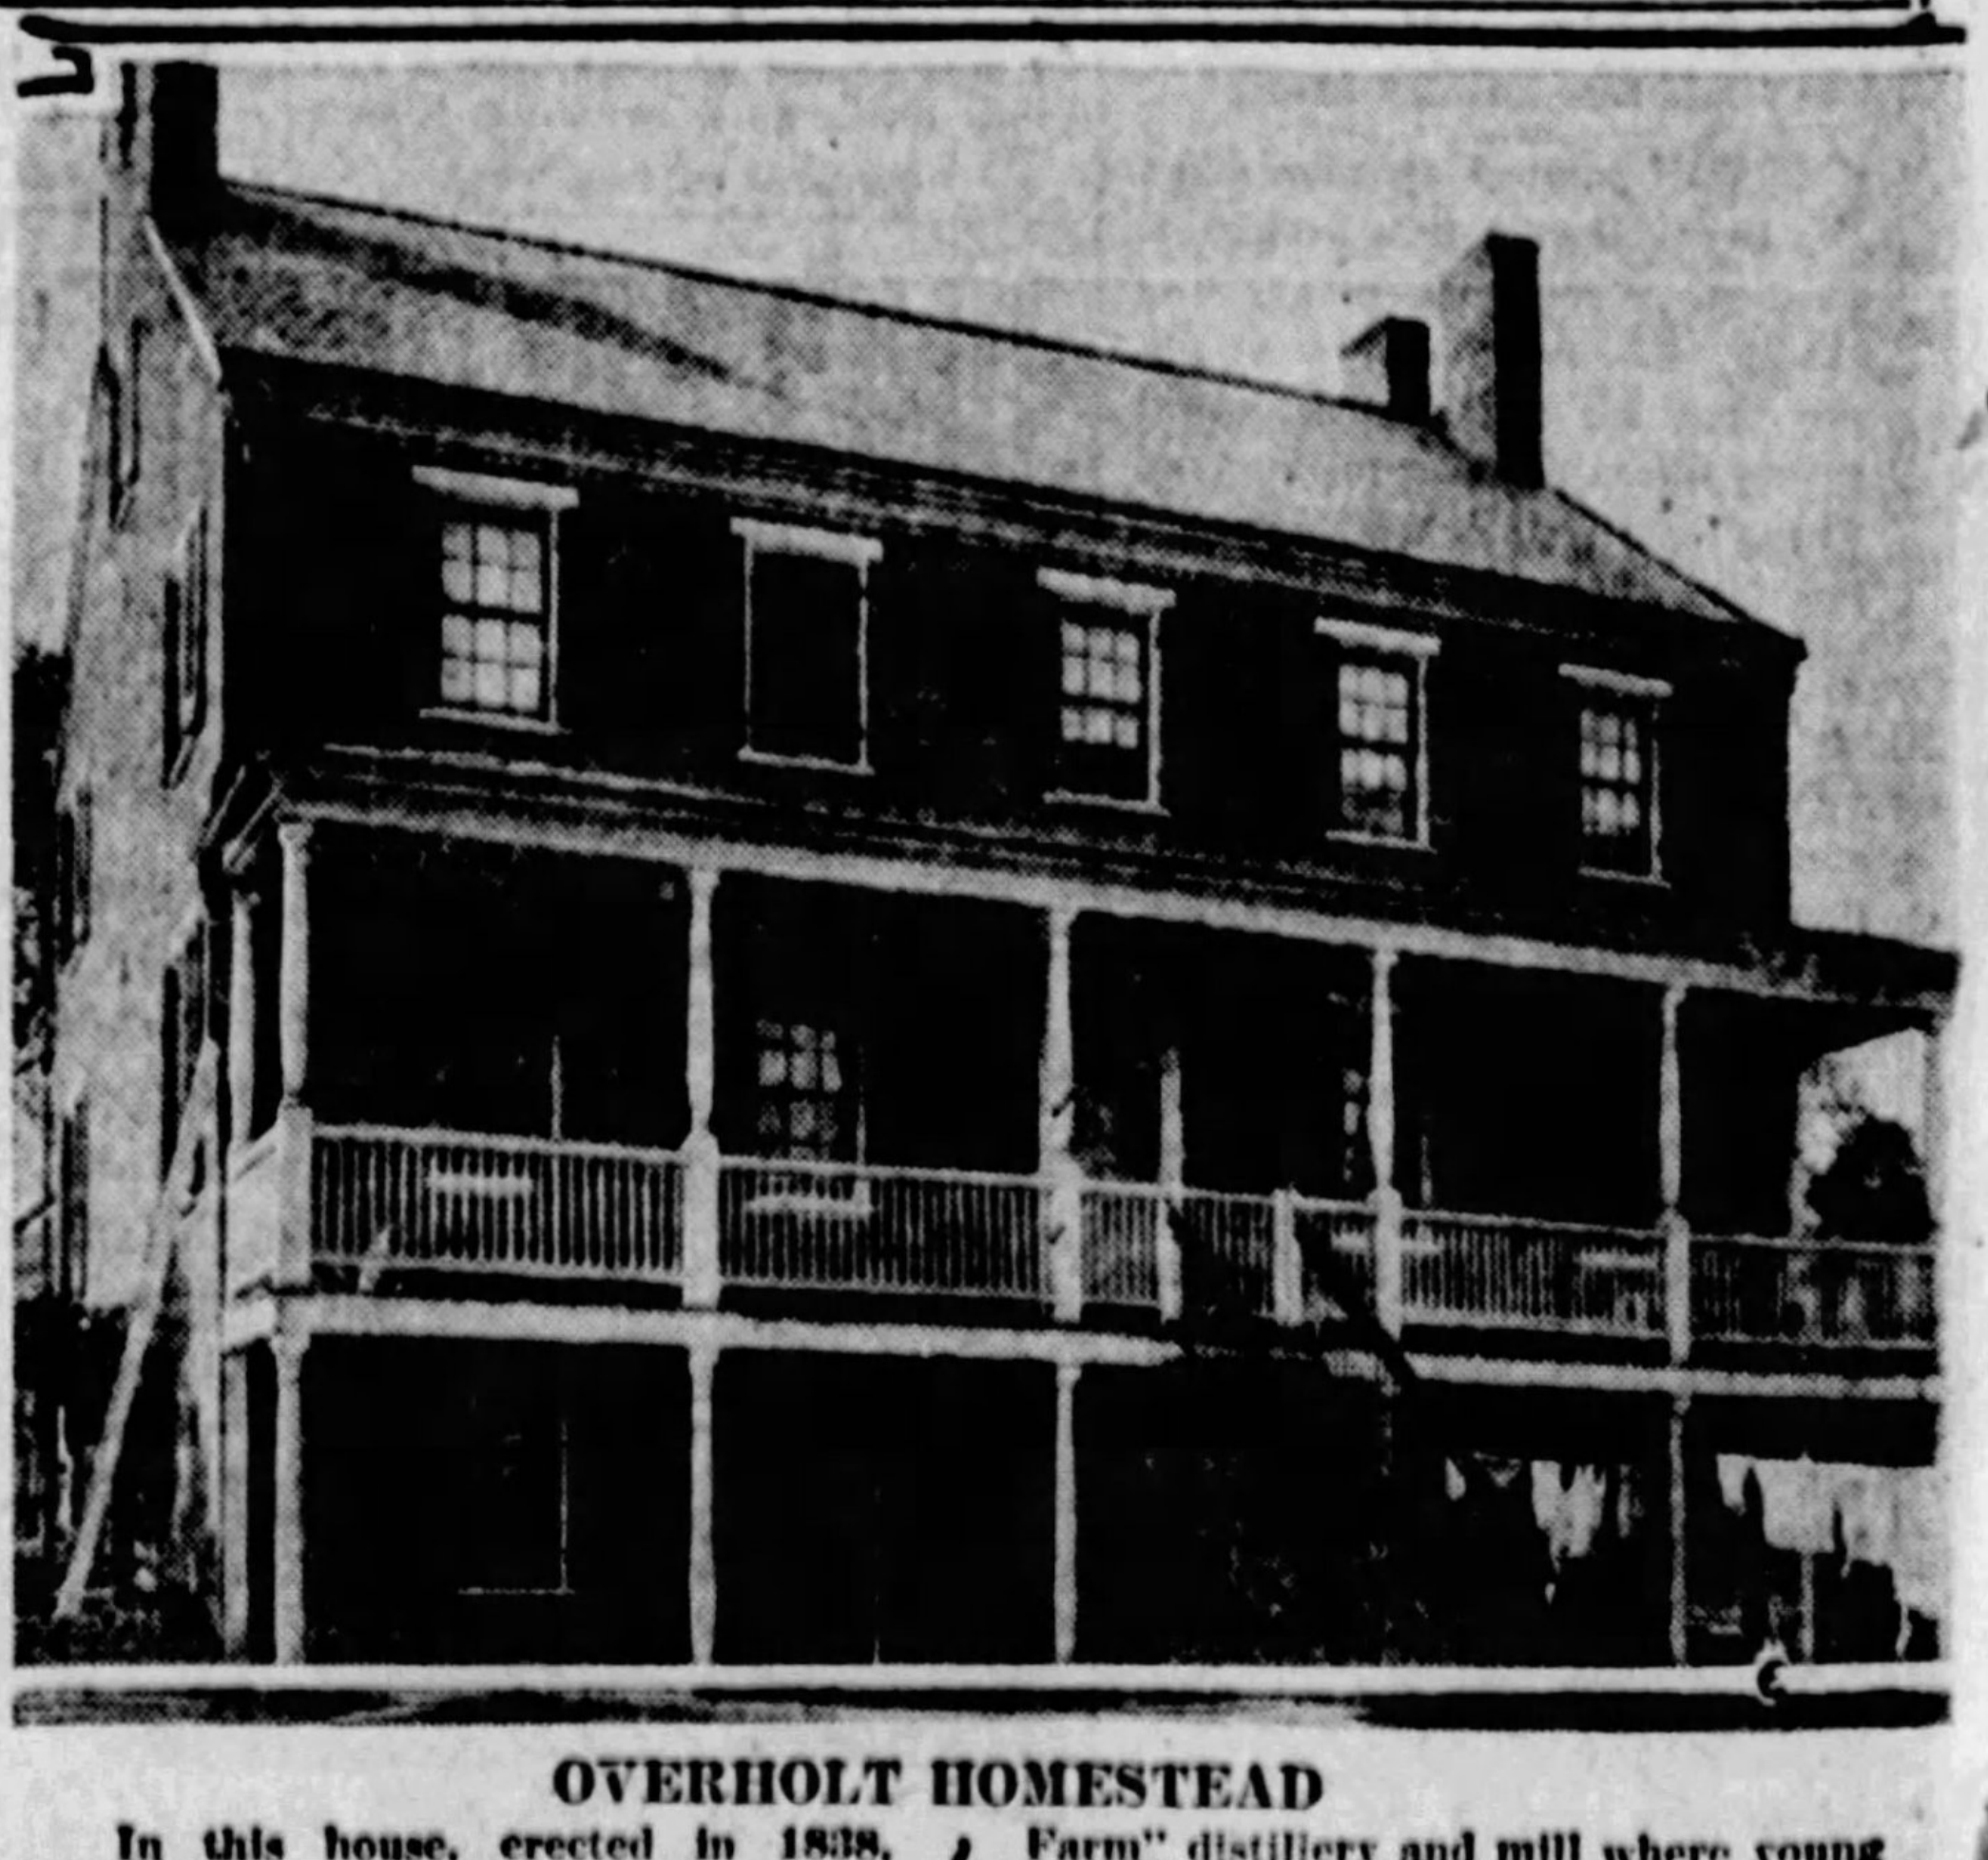
The Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania at the request of Miss Frick will take over the custodianship of this little stone house over the Overholt spring and establish the Westmoreland-Fayette County Branch of the society. Arbors and vines shade the doorway as of yore when Frick, the boy, played here.

MISS HELEN FRICK

The devoted daughter evolved the plan of making her father's birthplace a national memorial and generously provided funds for its restoration and maintenance.

OLDTIME FIREPLACE

It is easy to picture the young mother of the baby Henry Clay Frick nursing her boy during the winter of 1849-50 before the great wood fire that blazed on these quaint andirons, filling with cheery glow the little room where the child was born.



OVERHOLT HOMESTEAD

In this house, erected in 1838, lived Abe Overholt, grandfather of H. C. Frick, and in this house the future coke king spent his boyhood. Across the road from the house was the "Old Farm" distillery and mill where young Frick began his career as a clerk. This building has been restored to its original appearance and will house a library and museum.

FLEE BLAZE IN NIGHT CLOTHES

Choking and gasping through smoke-filled halls, when fire threatened a three-story brick dwelling at 1326 Sheffield street early this morning, Mrs. Sara Sumner, awakened by a passer-by who discovered fire in the basement, aroused her three sons and seven roomers, probably saving them from suffocation. Mrs. Sumner was slightly overcome and was given medical aid at the scene, following which she was taken to the home of a neighbor, where she and her sons spent the remainder of the night.

The fire started in the laundry from an undetermined cause. The family washing was destroyed and dense smoke filled the halls and rooms. A pedestrian, discovering the blaze, rang the doorbell and succeeded in attracting the attention of Mollie Ingram, a roomer, who aroused Mrs. Sumner. Risking her life in the smoke-filled halls, the courageous mother ran from room to room arousing the other occupants of the house, refusing to leave until all the others were safely outside. Two of Mrs. Sumner's sons, Charles, 14, and Hubert, 16, assisted their mother to the street, while Harry, 19, ran to the corner to sound the fire alarm.

The loss was estimated at $400.

TAXI DRIVER STRICKEN WHILE USING TELEPHONE

Stricken by a mysterious malady while telephoning his office from a street box this morning, Lugi Bruno, about 26, of 4303 Graphic street, a taxicab driver, was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital by police and is being held for observation. Bruno was found unconscious at Hazelwood and Murray avenues. He was revived at the hospital and was said to be resting comfortably.

Buggy Rides O. K. Autos Out at Oaklohoma 'U'

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 26.—(AP.)—University of Oklahoma authorities have approved the horse and buggy as a substitute for student-owned automobiles.

President W. B. Bizzell, who issued an ultimatum against dates in motor cars, in interpreting his decree, said, "Not by any strength of the imagination could buggies be placed in the category of automobiles."

Several students from farms immediately swapped transportation facilities with the folks.

2 HELD IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Two automobile drivers were held in Carnegie last night in connection with the death of one child and the injury of two others.

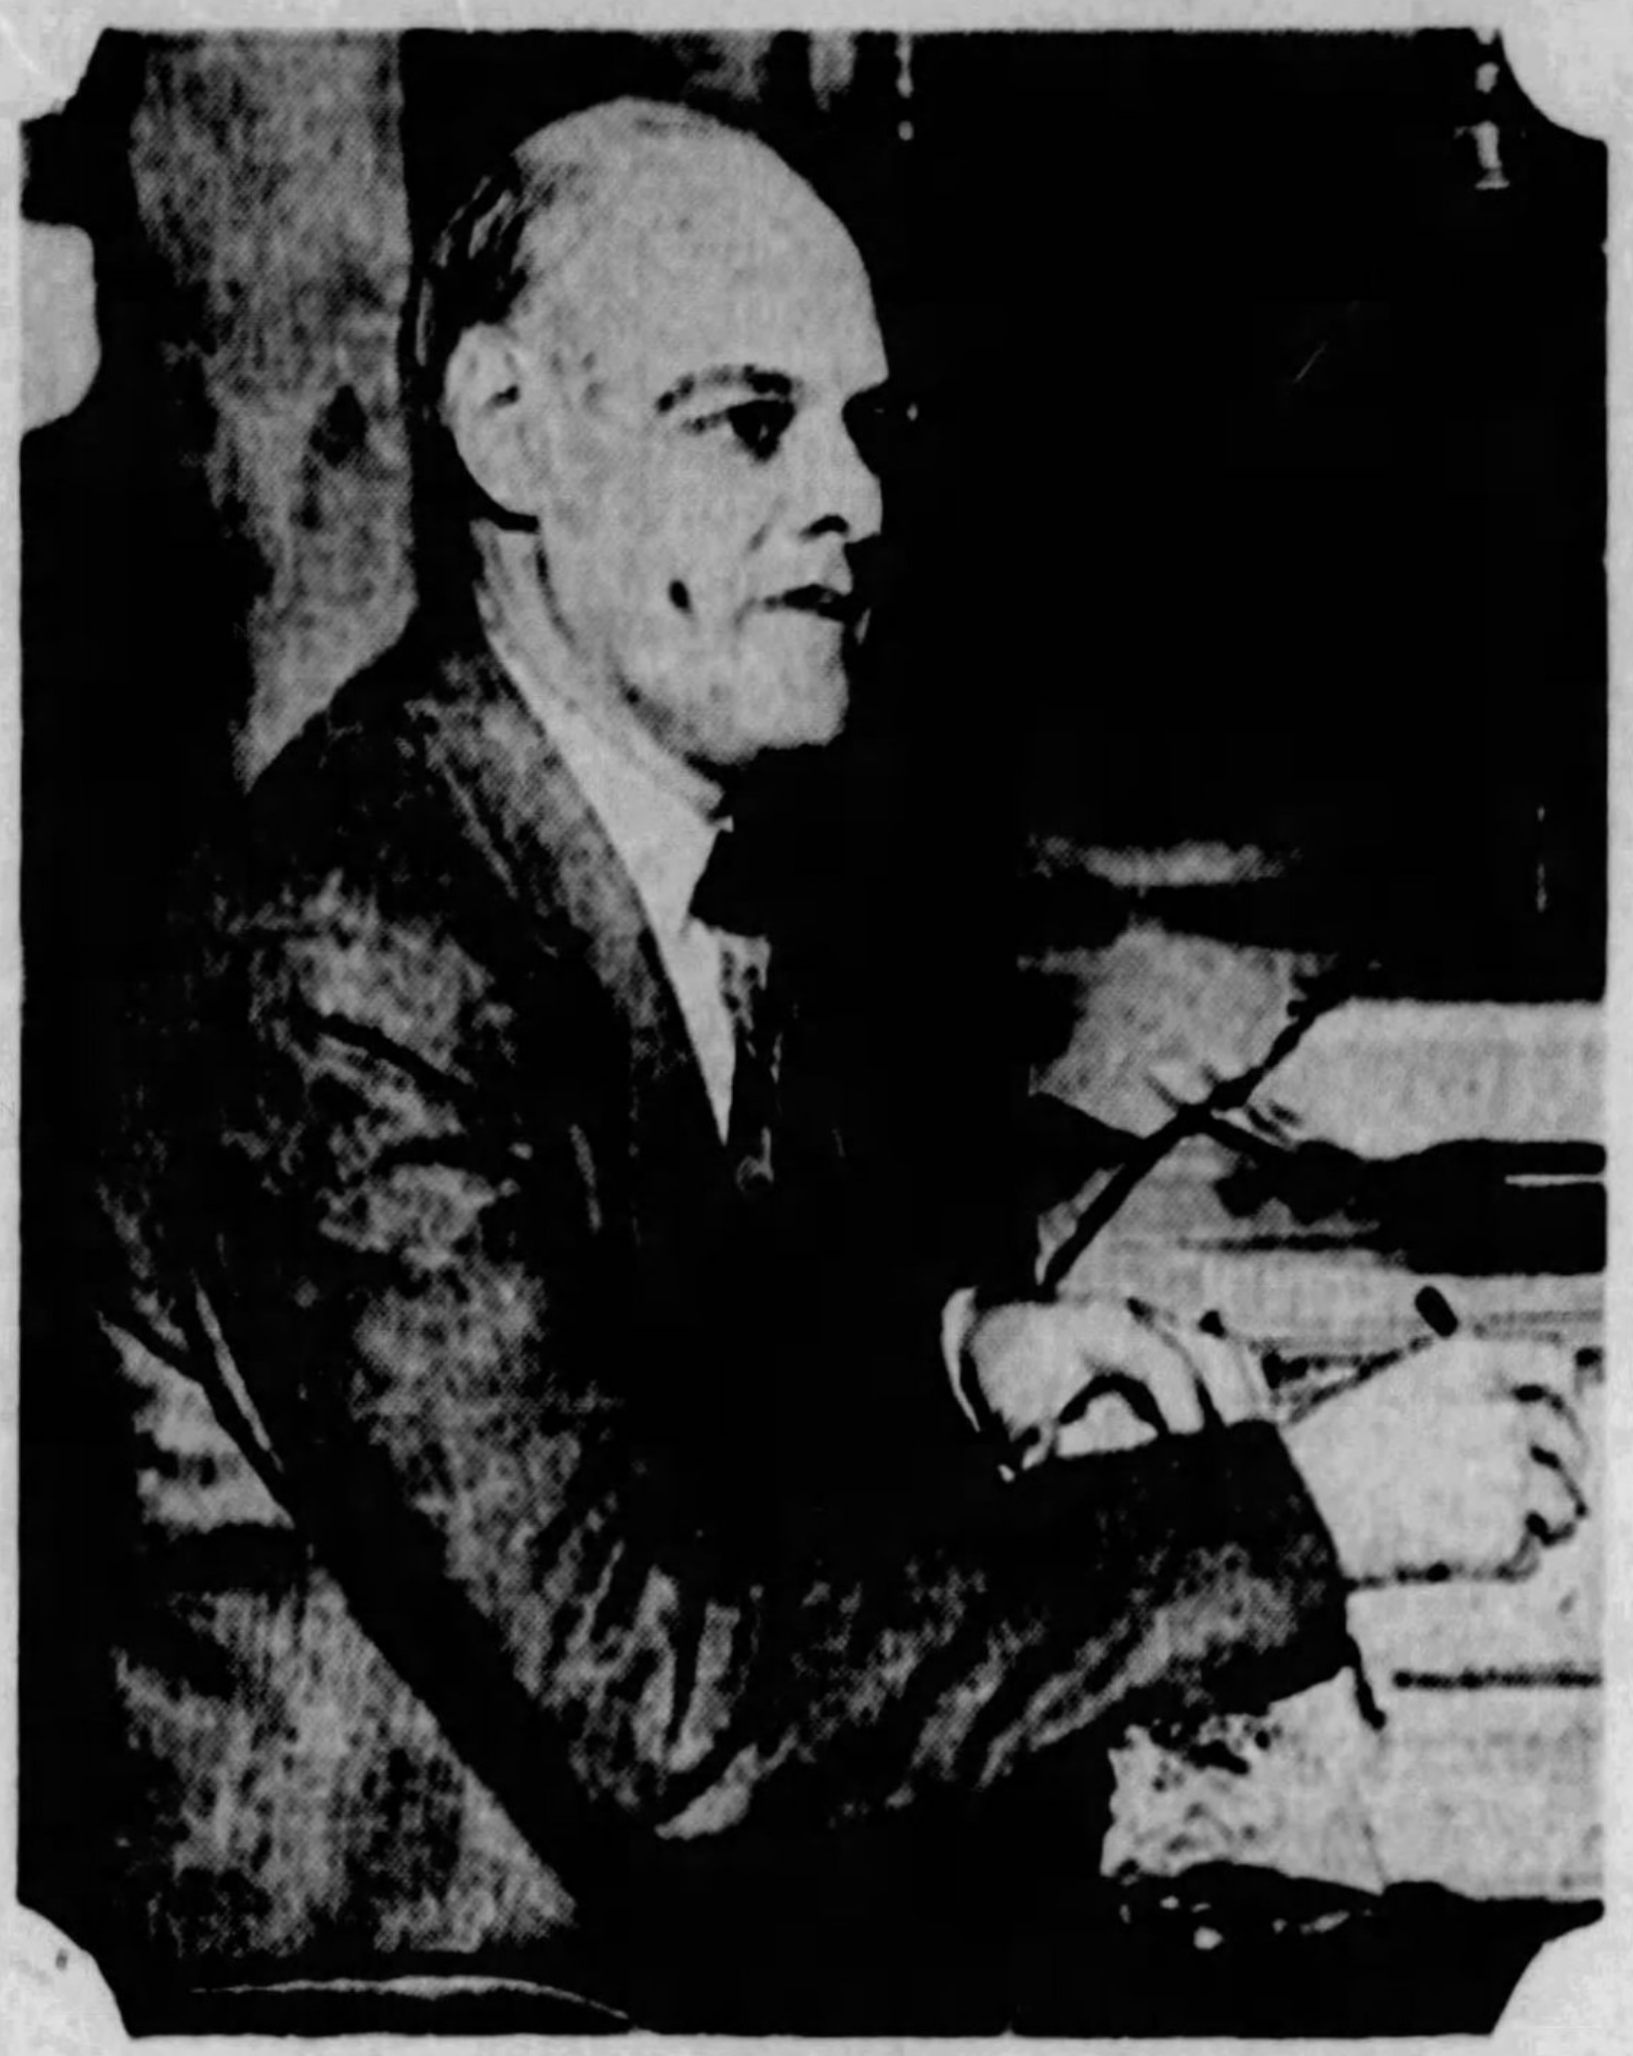
Harry F. Unger, 22, of 3022 Norland avenue, East Carnegie, posted $1,000 bond pending an inquest into the death of Anthony Irio, 9, of 431 Justice avenue, Carnegie, killed Monday when run over by a truck alleged to have been driven by Unger, at Sandsberry and East Main streets, Carnegie.

Thomas Rodwell, 20, of 220 East Main street, Carnegie, was held for court by Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen, charged with speeding away Monday after his automobile struck Marion Jones, 6, and Dorothy Miller, 6, at Chestnut and Jane streets, Carnegie.

AUTO STARTED BY BOY KNOCKS OVER TWO GIRLS

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Oct. 26.—A boy's prank in starting an unoccupied automobile "just to see it run" nearly cost the lives of Dorcas Haines, 16, and Florence Shupe, 17, at Kingsview. The two girls were struck and knocked down by the car as it ran wild down the highway before it was ditched at the roadside. They suffered slight injuries. John Bloo, 12, after starting the car, leaped and escaped injury.

'SWEET ADELINE' AUTHOR



DICK GERARD

An employe of the postoffice in New York, Dick Gerard, is author of that favorite street corner song "Sweet Adeline." Gerard says it was a girl behind the music counter of a New York store that inspired him to write the song that has made him famous, if not wealthy.

Will Sees Branch Banks as Aid to Robbers

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 26.—The American Bankers' Association are holding their annual benefit at Houston. It's their biggest benefit year. The government has contributed permission for them to consolidate to freeze out the little fellow. The public, of course, will contribute everything else. So really, the only problem before the convention is "How much bonuses on loans will we make 'em pay above the legal rate of interest?" Branch banks are all the go now. They realize they have got to bring the bank nearer the robber. He won't be annoyed by driving through traffic just to rob one bank. The branch bank is the robber's only salvation.

WILL ROGERS.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

P. S.—Every banker that could afford a failure during the past year is there.

EX-POLICE LIEUTENANT'S POCKETBOOK IS STOLEN

W. R. Reynolds, 1247 Manning street, served long enough and honorably enough to retire as a police lieutenant. Last night he was aboard a Highland avenue car when he was jostled by several men at Highland and Penn avenues. After they left the car he discovered that his pocketbook containing $7 was missing.

MAGRUDER CALLED TO CARPET

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, who created a furore in naval circles by declaring in a magazine article that the United States Navy is inefficiently and uneconomically administered, has been detached from duty as commandant of the Fourth Naval District, with headquarters at Philadelphia, and ordered to report to Washington on November 5.

The strictest secrecy is being maintained as to the significance of this move. It was generally believed in Navy circles, however, that the admiral is to be drastically disciplined for what high department officials regard as a serious breach of discipline.

Secretary Wilbur refused to discuss the case.

The mere detachment of an officer from duty is, in itself, not of a disciplinary nature, it was explained. Officers in line for promotion are detached, called to Washington and assigned to their new command.

In the case of Admiral Magruder, however, the feeling persisted that he is to be called to account for his criticism of the Navy's administration.

FIGHT? HE'S IRISH

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—(INS.)—Questioned today whether he would fight Secretary Wilbur's order suspending him from duty at the Navy Yard here, Admiral T. P. Magruder smiled and said:

"My mother was a Kildare. My father's name was Magruder and my hair is red."

The popular Navy Yard commander refused to make further comment.

Preserve Old Frick Home as Memorial

The spring house loft in which Henry Clay Frick was born at the old Overholt homestead near Mt. Pleasant is to be preserved as a memorial to the coke king, manufacturer and philanthropist.

Miss Helen Frick tendered the quaint stone building, the imposing manor house and outbuildings with 32 acres of ground to the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, to be maintained under the custodianship of the society. At the October meeting of the society in Historical Hall, Parkman boulevard, last night a resolution was adopted accepting Miss Frick's offer.

BAN ON CHANGES

The Frick birthplace will be conducted as the Westmoreland-Fayette County Branch of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania under the direction of a committee of five persons, three to be named by Miss Frick and two by the society. This committee is enjoined by the donor that no change in the grounds or buildings shall be made during her lifetime, and its members will pass upon gifts and relics which may be placed in the Overholt farmhouse.

The grounds and buildings, which include the famous "old Farm" distillery and the Overholt mills, recently were restored to their original appearance by Miss Frick, and the visitor today sees the homestead very much as it appeared on that December day in 1849 when John Frick and Elizabeth Overholt, his wife, living in the stone spring house, hailed the arrival of a baby boy. They named him after Henry Clay and he grew up on the farm, attended the little one-room school house on the hill and began his business career in the mill office near by.

The spring house is a substantial building of stone covered with stucco. Around its quaint doorway is a grape arbor that in these days would be dignified as a pergola. On the first floor is a long trough where the milk was cooled and the second floor is divided into two cozy rooms, one with a beautiful wood fireplace and a great cupboard built under a stairway that winds to the half-story above. It was in this room with the fireplace, its andirons and wrought iron implements that Henry Clay Frick was born on December 19, 1849.

TO HOUSE MUSEUM

When Miss Frick proposed to turn over her father's old home to the Historical Society she made generous provision for its maintenance. William H. Stevenson, president of the society, and the directors of the organization visited the place and arranged to establish the Westmoreland-Fayette county branch. A museum and library will be included and these will be housed in the homestead building, which was erected in 1838, and is a conspicuous example of early Pennsylvania residence architecture.

The Frick birthplace is on the county highway between Mt. Pleasant and Scottdale near the crest of Chestnut ridge and is on the tourist route between the Lincoln highway and the National road. The settlement is known as West Overton, a tiny village that has increased little in population in the last three-quarters of a century. The little brick schoolhouse which young Frick attended during the days of the Civil War is still large enough to accommodate the pupils of this district in East Huntingdon township. Miss Frick also remembered her father's attendance here and has endowed a library which is said to be the largest and most complete possessed by any country school in the state.

TWO FAYETTE COUNTY DIVORCE TRIALS OPEN

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 26.—Two crashes on the matrimonial highway were heard in court here. Mrs. Helen Karo, of Isabella, seeks annulment of her marriage to John Karo, Brownsville, on the grounds that he had previously been married to Elizabeth Backney, of Brownsville.

Six months after Robert Hall left South Union township to seek work in Illinois, he married Katherine E. Dailey, at Dixon, Ill., his wife alleged in a divorce proceeding in which she was granted a decree. On complaint of his wife Hall was arrested, convicted of bigamy and sentenced to prison.

HOLD THREE IN BAD MONEY RING

Two men in the "honeymoon counterfeiting" case were held for court, while their brides of a week were discharged by a United States commissioner yesterday. A third male member of the gang also was held.

Lewis H. Robinson, John W. Roxby, and Eugene Roxby were held, the first under $5,000 bail and the latter two under $3,500 bail each, all charged with forging and passing counterfeit $20 notes. Robinson's wife, Pauline, 19, and John Roxby's wife, Louisa, 19, were discharged. All were arrested in Wheeling, W. Va., save Eugene Roxby, taken in Pittsburgh yesterday.

COURT OPENING CHANGED TO AVOID DEER SEASON

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Oct. 26.—Judge C. Furst, an enthusiastic deer hunter, has issued a decree changing the opening of the December term of court from December 12 to December 20 to permit jurors and others who are deer hunters opportunity to get out of the woods before court convenes. The open season for deer is December 1 to 15.

Ill-Fated Liner Served As War Transport

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The Principessa Mafalda, a twin-screw, steel vessel of 9,210 tons, was built at Genoa in 1908 for the Navigazione Generale Italiana primarily for the South American trade.

Her passenger list on her last tragic voyage carried 1,600 names, of whom all but 110 were Italian immigrants bound for the Italian colonies in Brazil and Argentina, officials here said today.

During the World War the vessel served as a troop transport under the Italian flag, and seven years ago figured in a false report which indicated the ship had struck a submerged mine and sunk with a loss of 700 lives. This report proved unfounded.

Shipping records here show that the Principessa touched a United States port only once, that in 1914. She has been used exclusively in South American trade and up until a few years ago was the fastest liner plying between Italy and South America.

LOOK FOR GOBEL HERE TODAY

Delay in Indianapolis, where he addressed the Rotary Club yesterday, prevented the arrival here of Art Gobel, winner of first prize in the Dole air derby from San Francisco to Hawaii. He spent the night in Dayton, O., where he arrived at 6 p. m., and is expected to fly here today.

Gobel, with John Phillips and Fred E. Hamlin, will fly to Pittsburgh in the Woolaroc, the monoplane in which he made the historic flight across the 2,100 miles of Pacific Ocean. He will be the guest here of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh and will speak at the luncheon Thursday in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

DRIVE ON DOGS IN M'KEESPORT

McKeesport health officials are expected to ask a state quarantine on dogs today. The attack yesterday by a dog on John Dingledorfer of Grandview extension, his daughter, Mary, and a guest in the Dingledorfer home brought the total of persons bitten by dogs in McKeesport recently to 11. Five dogs in which rabies have developed have been killed and six others are under observation.

HOUNDS AGAIN HUNT WOMAN

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Led by a pair of bloodhounds, a posse of friends and police started out again this morning beating the wooded hills of Rock Creek Park for trace of Mrs. Anna Ramsey Forbush, wife of the pastor of the First Congregational Church at Canadaiguia, N. Y., who disappeared here a week ago while attending a theater.

An all-day search yesterday proved unavailing, despite numerous clues furnished by residents in the vicinity of the park, who reported seeing a woman lurking among the trees.

PRISON SHIFTS UNRULY GANGSTERS TO EAST

'FOUR HORSEMEN' LEADER IS SENT AWAY

The last of the notorious "Four Horsemen," ring leaders in a riot and jail break at the Western Penitentiary April, 1925, and one of the most dangerous gangs ever to sign their names on the prison register, has been transferred from "down the river" to the Eastern Penitentiary.

Warden Stanley P. Ashe has notified the county commissioners that Edward Burke, alias Michael Norton, the last member of the gang, has been sent to the eastern institution. Edward Fiddell, who participated in the daring break for freedom following the riot, also was sent to the Eastern Penitentiary. Burke was sentenced from this county after being convicted of second degree murder, robbery and breaking and entering a building. Fiddell was convicted from Cambria county for larceny, breaking and entering, assault and battery and breaking and escaping jail.

Warden Ashe did not assign his reasons for having the prisoners transferred, but it is understood that both Burke and Fiddell have been causing trouble at the Western Penitentiary for several months past, and to punish them they were sent away. Two of the "Four Horsemen's" careers were ended when they were electrocuted about a year ago.

"ONION BUYER" ROBS SELLER

A holdup man who posed as a prospective onion buyer held up Paul Carpe, of 315 McClure street, Homestead, in a car in the produce yard, this morning and at the point of revolver robbed him of $75. Carpe was a salesman in charge of the car of onions in which the robbery took place.

CHRISTIANITY IS URGED TO STOP ANOTHER WAR

Quoting Sir George Buchanan, former British minister to the Balkan countries, as saying there are a dozen reasons for war in that region now for every one that existed before the struggle of 1914-1918, Oliver Dryer of London, field secretary of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation, told a Sewickley audience last night that he, on a recent visit to "the cockpit of Europe," found at least 14 dangerous situations, any one of which might easily lead to war.

Mr. Dryer, a retired Scotch Presbyterian minister, was talking to a little group, including several Sewickley clergymen, at the home of Miss Hilda Gundelfinger, 206 Woodland road, of a talk with King Boris of Bulgaria and other interesting experiences in a tour that he made in an effort to promote better understanding among peoples.

Mr. Dryer bitterly arraigned the Christian churches as aiders and abetters of war. They had brought the very word religion into disrepute, he declared.

PARDON ASKED FOR BANDANA GANGSTER

HARRISBURG, Oct. 26.—The Board of Pardons today was asked to grant a pardon to Humbert Frandon, 23, of Allegheny county because he was forced into a career of crime by members of the famous Blue Bandana gang.

Frandon, his counsel said, at the point of a revolver, was forced to drive an automobile used by members of the gang. After the first robbery Frandon was threatened by the gang unless he participated in other thefts. The youth was given a 5 to 10-year sentence in the Western Penitentiary for robbery. The board was told that Albert Carelli, who was pardoned by the former Pardon Board for murder, was a member of the gang. Carelli is now serving from 28 to 56 years in the penitentiary for robbery. Another Allegheny county case before the board was the application of Antonio Caliendo, murder, commuted.

Caliendo shot Dominick Cambres in Swissvale February 19, 1921, in self defense, the board was told.

Keaton Film Is Treat For Bird House Club

He had just finished high school and was entering college. And his sweetheart, bidding him good-bye, asked that he become a star in football, in baseball, in the crew—anywhere in college athletics.

Being a slim, studious boy, never given to athletic competition, he realized how almost impossible it was to be a leader in something he had no talent for.

But to do it, or lose his sweetheart? He had to face either one.

How he meets the crisis of his young life is the story that members of The Sun-Tele Bird House Club will see next Saturday morning at a quarter to nine, when they gather in the Penn Theater as guests of The Sun-Tele Bird House Club. Buster Keaton, in "College," will be the hero—and play the part of the gangling lad who wants to be a football hero.

Present your membership card, boys and girls, and the theater will be yours. And remember—next Saturday morning.

"PENNY ANTE" ROBBER SENT TO WORKHOUSE

Testimony of his wife that she had given him a number of pennies to play "penny ante" did not prevent Aurelius Tyner, of 308 Ridge avenue, from being convicted of entering the drug store of Ben Harris at Halket and Forbes streets, July 1, and taking 167 pennies. Many pennies were found on him when he was arrested, it was testified. Judge Josiah Cohen sentenced him to three to six months in the workhouse.

SAYS JOB, NOT PUBLIC, URGES M'GOVERN

Controller C. C. McGovern is running for Commissioner on the Independent party ticket "simply because he wants a job," said Director of Public Safety James M. Clark at a meeting in Taylor Allderdice High School last night.

"When McGovern was a candidate for Controller in the primary he told the people he did not want office, but it was necessary for him to continue in the office of Controller in order to carry on a work he had begun in their interest," said Clark. "The primary returns made him change his mind. He saw that his vote was nearly 100,000 and that the vote of Houlahen, the Democratic Commissioner, was only 15,000. He saw a chance to land a good job at a good salary by defeating Houlahen."

William B. McKechnie, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was one of the speakers at a reception given Commissioner E. V. Babcock in Masonic Hall, Wilkinsburg, last night. Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong who suffered his third bereavement in a year when his brother died yesterday, will not take any part in the campaign this week at least.

M'GOVERN HITS OPPONENTS

The continued refusal of the County Commissioners to permit him to engage auditors to inspect the books leads to "the only logical conclusion" that "they have the county's finances in such bad shape that they would rather not have the public know anything about it," said Controller C. C. McGovern, independent candidate for county commissioner, speaking last night at meetings in Sharpsburg and Aspinwall. He charged that the commissioners have furnished debt statements that do not agree.

"What do you suppose was their purpose in deliberately trying to mislead your Controller?" he asked. "Don't you believe that they did so because they had something to hide?"

George B. Shields, McGovern's running mate, also addressed both meetings.

Stop Indigestion Before It Begins

Don't wait for sourness, gas and the gnawing, griping pains of indigestion to attack you before you seek relief. Stop these things before they start. Even the worst stomach sufferers avoid indigestion by forming the safe and pleasant practice of taking a little Bisurated Magnesia—either tablets or powder immediately after every meal. This instantly neutralizes excess acid in the stomach, prevents its further formation and really makes indigestion impossible. Food digests naturally, healthfully, just as Nature intended, giving the body the full benefit of its nourishing qualities. That is why Bisurated Magnesia is used every day, the world over, by many thousands of former sufferers who now eat what they want with no more fear of indigestion. Druggists everywhere sell and recommend Bisurated Magnesia, and a good time to start its use would be today.

MOTORS AND STEEL PROFITS OVER $250,000,000

EARNINGS HIGH FOR FIRST 9 MONTHS

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Investors in America's two premier industrial corporations today found themselves legatees to profits aggregating more than $250,000,000 rolled up in the first nine months of 1927 by the General Motors and the United States Steel Corporations.

As usual, General Motors showed the way to the Steel Corporation, its nearest competitor in giant earning capacity. Motors had net earning for the first three-quarters of the year of $193,758,000 while the Steel Corporation had net income of $74,050,000.

Motors' nine months' earnings, abetted by the absence from the producing field of Henry Ford, who is concentrating on the output of a new model car, surpassed those of any previous complete year. For the third quarter alone Motors earned $64,500,000, as compared with $56,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1926, which was a former record third quarter. Comparisons with the 1926 profits, however, are complicated by the inclusion for the year 1927 to date of earnings of the Fisher Body Corporation which did not figure in all of last year's reports.

Steel's earnings declined from the corresponding period of last year, but the statement showed nine months' net earnings of $132,995,000, and $41,373,831 for the third quarter of 1927. This is at a rate of $7.75 per share on the 7,116,235 shares of common and compares with $145,500,000 or $13.07 per share on 5,083,025 shares outstanding in the first three-quarters of 1926.

For the third quarter of this year Steel's earnings dropped $11,300,000, while those of General Motors increased approximately $8,500,000.

FOUR DOGS WITH A SINGLE THOUGHT

TIME TO EAT

Great Britain has become a nation of dog lovers and owners, if one can judge from the tremendous growth of the dog-breeding industry. It is estimated that there are nearly 4,000,000 dogs in the country, or one to every 10 human beings. They contribute nearly 1,000,000 pounds a year to the inland revenue. Photo shows four fine thoroughbred Great Danes, awaiting the arrival of their luncheon.

Sunday Concert Case Postponed to Nov. 3

The campaign of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society for the right to give concerts for its members on Sunday is developing into a battle of legal celebrities, with no quarter asked or given, it became apparent yesterday in the County Court, when a postponement of the case, which was to have been heard Friday, was granted until November 3. It was disclosed that John Edward Jones, noted Philadelphia attorney, will be associated with William H. Pratt as counsel for the Allegheny County Sabbath Observance Association in its effort to have the conviction of nine members of the symphony society in an alderman's court sustained in the higher tribunals, to which the members had appealed.

Jones is the lawyer appointed by the Attorney General as special counsel for the commonwealth in the prosecution of the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial Exposition and the Philadelphia baseball club of the American League for violations of the Sunday laws of 1794, fought those cases successfully through the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Flushed with their victory, the Philadelphia Society for the Preservation of the Sabbath is sending Jones here to aid the local Sabbath Observance Association.

The symphony society is to be represented by a galaxy of legal talent no less brilliant, Gordon and Smith, C. F. Arensberg and John M. Freeman are among the attorneys of record, and Reed, Smith, Shaw & Maclay are expected to participate at least in an advisory capacity.

The task of counsel for the symphony society has been made vastly more difficult, in the opinion of Mr. Pratt, by a Supreme Court decision handed down after the appeal to the County Court had been filed. In that appeal, filed in the latter part of June, certain points both of fact and of law were adduced as warranting the reversal of the alderman's verdict. But the Supreme Court finding in the sesquicentennial and Philadelphia Athletics cases, handed down in July, puts a quietus, according to Mr. Pratt, on the legal contentions of the defendants; for that body held that the act of 1794 is constitutional from the standpoints both of the Pennsylvania Constitution and the Constitution of the United States.

"Of course," added Mr. Pratt, "the Pennsylvania Supreme Court is not the final arbiter of cases involving the Federal Constitution; but in the face of its opinion I do not see how the symphony society can expect successfully to defend its claims."

Regardless of what the county court's decision may be, it will not end the legal battle, both sides made plain yesterday. Defeat will not be recognized, spokesmen for the symphony society said, and the Rev. Robert M. Blackwood, head of the Sabbath Observance Association, was no less determined. There is a prospect, therefore, that if no legal barrier should intervene, the case eventually would reach the United States Supreme Court.

The appellants in the case as it now stands—that is, the convicted members of the symphony society—are George E. Benson, treasurer, Richard S. Rauh, secretary; Elias Breeskin, associate conductor; Edward Specter, manager; Bert Floersheim and Wilmer M. Jacoby, members of the executive board, and Max R. Seifert, Israel Weinstein and Homer Ochsenhirt, of the orchestra committee.

Mr. Blackwood intimated that if the symphony society should persist in giving Sunday concerts additional prosecutions would be instituted.

CALIFORNIA AVE. BLOCK SOLD FOR $90,000

A three-story brick store and apartment building at 3633-37 California avenue, corner Verner avenue, Twenty-seventh Ward, has been sold by Mrs. Rose H. Wilner of McKeesport to Jacob Rosen. The lot is 95x120 feet.

In part payment, Mr. Rosen deeded a one-half interest in his property consisting of seven brick houses and 11 brick garages on Hobart street, Knoxville. The total consideration was about $90,000. Alfred L. Reel was the broker.

A house in Cornell avenue, West View, lot 40x150 feet, has been sold by Chester Willoughby to Walter J. Lange for $10,200.

Adam E. Born has sold to Henry W. Bergmann 80x150 feet with house in Rhine street, Twenty-fourth Ward, for $12,000.

Harry Culver of Culver City, Cal., vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, addressed more than 100 Pittsburgh realtors yesterday following the noon luncheon of the Pittsburgh board at the William Penn Hotel.

The increased duties and responsibilities of the realtor in the modern age were stressed by Mr. Culver. He pointed out that the realtor must expect to meet competition with increased service to the public.

Mr. Culver left yesterday afternoon by airplane for Buffalo, N. Y., where he will speak to the Buffalo Real Estate Board.

SENATOR CURTISS IN PRESIDENTIAL RACE

Asks Full Backing Of Kansas G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Republican leader of the Senate, today entered the 1928 presidential race.

In a letter to Roy L. Bone of Topeka, organizer of the "Curtis for President" Club in Kansas, the Senator wrote that "if my friends of Kansas desire to send a delegation to the next Republican national convention favorable to my nomination, I shall be greatly pleased to be their candidate."

The Republican leader humbly declared, however, that "I will not consent to become a candidate if the delegation is to be selected with the view of voting for me for a few ballots as a 'favorite son.'"

As a rule, Senator Curtis as a party leader has been in accord with President Coolidge and his policies, but he did split with the administration on the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, voting for this measure, which was vetoed by the President.

Senator Curtis, who is 67 years old, and a descendant of Indian forebears, was born in Topeka, Kan., and educated in that state. He served as county prosecutor before entering the House of Representatives here in 1886.

3 HELD IN DEATH OF MAN BY STOLEN TAXI

Mark Stack, 4416 Calvin street, driver of a taxicab he reported was stolen, and Cornelius Murphy, 24, of 409 Fortieth street, and Mart Murray, 25, of 3807 Foster street, the alleged thieves, were held for the coroner by Magistrate John Orie in Penn Avenue Court today in connection with the death of Albert Blum, 45, killed by the cab at Grant street, Millvale. Stack was not in the cab at the time of the accident, but was held as a witness.

THE DEATH ROLL

William L. Davis, 71, rental manager of George Brothers, real estate dealers, died Monday in his home in Glenshaw. Mr. Davis was born in Pittsburgh. He was a charter member of the Glenshaw Presbyterian Church, being clerk of the church session. He was also a member of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; the Building Owners' and Managers' Association; the Real Estate Board of Pittsburgh; the Ruling Elders Association of the Pittsburgh Presbytery and was secretary and treasurer of the Pine Creek Building and Loan Association, of which he was one of the organizers. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Fannie C. Davis, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Permar.

George E. Gimiotti.

George E. Cimiotti, 56, died Monday in Mercy Hospital. Mr. Cimiotti was born in Pittsburgh and had lived here all his life, having been engaged in the woolen business as the Pittsburgh representative of Lippincott, Johnson & Co., of Philadelphia, for 30 years. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Roberta A. Cimiotti; two sons, Dale E. and Richard A., both of Pittsburgh; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Cimiotti, of Atlantic City; three sisters and one brother.

John M. Schneider.

John M. Schneider, 69, for 54 years a resident of the West End and engaged in the carpenter and mason trades, died Tuesday in his home, 506 Weaver street. He was a member of the German Evangelical Church of the West End. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Minnie Stein Schneider; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Gehring and Mrs. Marie Hassler, and a son, Fred W. Schneider.

Mrs. M. H. McCandless.

Mrs. Margaret Hayes McCandless, sister of the late Mayor William B. Hayes, Jr., died Monday night in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles S. Lambie, in Denver, Colo. Mrs. McCandless was a lifelong member of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh. Besides Mrs. Lambie, she leaves a son, William J. McCandless of Fort Worth, Tex., and a daughter, Mrs. Robert B. Petty of Pittsburgh.

Armstrong Funeral.

Funeral services for Thomas Armstrong, 63, brother of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong and superintendent of county bridges for 13 years, who died Tuesday in St. Joseph's Hospital, will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Bingham Street Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. A. E. Husted will officiate. The burial will be in the South Side Cemetery.

Dr. Adolph Belber.

Dr. Adolph Belber, 57, of 5703 Hobart street, died Tuesday in West Penn Hospital. He practiced dentistry in the Pittsburgh district more than 30 years. He was a member of Rodef Shalom Temple. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Ray Levaur Belber; two daughters, Musette Belber, at home, and Mrs. Morris Horn; three brothers and one sister.

Joshua E. Bailey.

Joshua E. Bailey, 63, a resident of Swissvale for 39 years, died Tuesday in his home, 2233 Milligan avenue, Swissvale. Mr. Bailey was born in England. He was a member of Swissvale Lodge No. 656, F. & A. M. He leaves four sons, Alonzo, William, Victor and Eric Bailey, and two daughters, Miss Meta and Miss Winifred Bailey.

James Kane.

James Kane, 73, died Tuesday in his home, 135 Labelle street. Mr. Kane was a member of St. Mary's of the Mount Catholic Church and the Holy Name Society. He leaves five daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Ingels, Mrs. Mary Neeler, Mrs. Agnes Walker, Mrs. Margaret Heidenreich and Miss Zaida Kane, and one son, Andrew Kane.

WELL KNOWN FRANKLIN WRITER'S WIDOW DIES

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Elizabeth McLaurin, 84, widow of John J. McLaurin, for years famous as one of the best known writers and newspaper correspondents of the oil country of Pennsylvania, died suddenly Tuesday night at her home, Chestnut and Twelfth street. Mrs. McLaurin, who was unusually active for her age, was reading. Suddenly she slipped from her chair to the floor, dead. Her husband, who died about four years ago, was author of "Sketches in Crude Oil," and other oil country books.

Putting Those Indiscreet Girls Of History in Movies Affords Opportunities for Mob Scenes

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

(Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26.

ALL the girls in history with any indiscretions are having their amours aired and put in modern language. First National did so well with "Helen of Troy" that plans are now being made to star Cleopatra in the same type of satire. This gives the film companies a grand excuse for mob scenes for none of these girls ever traveled without being followed by an army. My mind goes back to Fox's "Cleopatra," in which Betty Blythe wore a couple of strings of pearls and let it go at that. Her film was regarded as both sexy and naughty in those days. If we looked at it today, it would probably be regarded as a Sunday school lesson.

Irvin Willat's little jaunt to Washington with Billie Dove had an unexpected sequel. He returned to Hollywood determined on one thing—and that was "The Big Gun," which had taken him to Washington for research work, should not be filmed. Mr. Willat is the type of quiet, restrained person who speaks with authority when he has anything to say. After listening to him, Universal decided he knew his business and immediately handed him "The Michigan Kid" to direct.

I don't suppose, now that Mr. Willat is to convert Rex Beach's story, "The Michigan Kid," into a movie instead of "The Big Gun," what happened really matters. It is whispered that official complications—"The Big Gun" is a military story—caused the postponement. Norman Kerry will have the lead in "The Michigan Kid" as soon as he finishes legioning with the Foreign Legion picture now under way at Universal City.

I don't know that I am considered the friend of the independent producer. Yet scarcely a day passes but one of them writes me a letter and tells me of his plans—and mentions the fact that I have always espoused the cause of smaller members of the producing fraternity.

Joe Rock, vice president of Sterling Productions, in his most superlative adjectives, lets it be known that "Outcast Souls" is a swell picture. He tells me it is the biggest thing he has ever attempted and one would have to be a poor prune indeed not to get enthusiastic. Chester Withey has been signed by Mr. Rock as the director, and the principals in the cast are Jriscilla Bonner, Ralph Lewis, Tom O'Brien, Lucy Beaumont and Charles Delaney. Irving L. Walenstein, whose name is new to me, has joined forces with Mr. Rock and will help him on his productions.

To the question of "When are you going to get married," the average film bride replies: "Whenever I can get a day off." Definite wedding dates out here are rare, for picture endings are as uncertain as April showers. Diana Kane's marriage to George Fitzmaurice has been set for some time within the next 10 days. "We don't know," said Diana, "until Fitz finished his next picture." Bebe Daniels will be Miss Kane's maid of honor. Fortunately Bebe isn't superstitious and doesn't believe in three times a bridesmaid and never a bride, for she and Marion Davies seem to be the most popular bridesmaids in Hollywood.

"The Mormons have come, the Mormons have come!" shouted the gateman at the United Artists' studio. "What does he mean?" I asked someone. "Only that Senator Reed Smoot and 500 Mormons from Salt Lake City are visiting the U. A. studios." Mormons, these days, "ain't" what they used to be. They only have one wife apiece and the name "Mormon" only means Salt Lake City and the church.

Will Rogers has started something. Everyone in Hollywood wants to fly. But most of the film companies do not share the enthusiasm of their high-priced stars when it comes to leaving the terra firma and traveling the sky route. "Too much money at stake," one of the film executives told me. Wallace Beery is one who out-talked his bosses and he travels to Chicago for the executive sales convention, via the Western Air Express. I don't blame him. I'd like to take the trip myself.

The arrival of Norma Talmadge and Agnes Christine Johnstone at United Artists' studio in their limousines the other day caused an old-timer to reminisce. "Say, he told me, "remember those two girls when they were at Vitagraph? Norma Talmadge was getting $25 a week and Agnes Johnstone was being paid $10 for a story. Now look at 'em." More power to the girls, say I. Their reunion after all these years is interesting. Agnes is writing the scenario of "A Woman Disputed" for Norma.

"Typical Italian Beauty"

TINA MANUELLI, selected by a jury of Italian painters as "the most typical Italian beauty," is a soprano soloist with the Florentine Choir of 50 voices, which is to give a concert in Carnegie Music Hall tomorrow night.

"Two Weeks Off" New Film for Mackaill

"Two Weeks Off," a play by Kenyon Nicholson and Thomas Barrows, is to be filmed by First National Pictures. Dorothy Mackaill will appear in the production. Nicholson also is the author of "The Barker," which First National Pictures will make, with Milton Sills as star.

Dorothy Mackaill has recently finished "Man Crazy," with Jack Mulhall, and will next work with him in "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," under the direction of Eddie Cline.

DAILY RECITALS GIVEN IN GALLERIES OF STORE

Mrs. Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey is appearing in concert at 3 o'clock every afternoon in the Boggs & Buhl piano galleries. The public is invited to these recitals.

Plays Authoress In Filming of Her Story

Character players in motion pictures are many times more fortunate in the rôles they portray on the screen than the stars and featured players, according to Eulalie Jensen, who plays the role of the "bird woman" in "Freckles," a Leo Meehan production for F-B-O.

The character in this popular novel from the pen of the late Gene Stratton Porter, which Miss Jensen plays, is a counterpart of Mrs. Porter herself. The "bird woman," who loved so well the oaks and maples of the Limberlost country in Indiana, reflected the innermost thoughts of the author. This is Miss Jensen's second role in Gene Stratton Porter stories, so she was able to bring to this part in "Freckles" an unusual knowledge of Mrs. Porter and has given a particularly graphic portrayal of the "bird woman," it is said. In "Laddie," another of Mrs. Porter's novels that was filmed a year ago, Miss Jensen played the role which characterized Mrs. Porter's mother.

Film Stars Plan November Wedding

After a visit of several weeks in Hollywood, Katherine Young Wilson, whose engagement to Richard Barthelmess was recently announced, has departed for her home in New York where she will plan the trousseau for her wedding.

The nuptials, according to present plans, will take place in New York in November, upon the completion of "The Noose," which is to be Barthelmess's next picture for First National release.

Miss Wilson formerly appeared with Barthelmess in the East and their engagement was announced while the star was in New York for the opening of his last production, "The Patent Leather Kid."

"BEGGAR'S OPERA" SEATS PLACED ON SALE TODAY

Tickets for the only Pittsburgh engagement of "The Beggar's Opera" are on sale in Mellor's, Wood street. The company is composed of 25 artists, the original London group that played in the Lyric Theater. It is making an American tour this year as it is just 200 years since this opera was composed by John Gay.

Japanese Singer To Be Heard In Pitt

Hizi Koyke, Japanese soprano, made her American debut in the Boston Opera House last week in the title role in Puccini's "Madam Butterfly." She will be heard here with the San Carlo Grand Opera Company in the same role in the Saturday matinee next week in the Pitt. Seats for the San Carlo performances will go on sale in the box office tomorrow.

E. H. Sothern will appear in the Nixon next Monday in "General John Regan," an Irish comedy by George A. Birmingham. Seats go on sale tomorrow.

Peter Lang is the latest addition to the cast of "My Maryland," now playing in the Alvin. Mr. Lang was drawn from the Philadelphia company after 36 weeks in that city. "My Maryland" is headed for Chicago after leaving Pittsburgh. The first matinee of the operetta will be played today.

In the Keith-Albee vaudeville program booked for the Davis next week, the headline act is to be given by Roye and Maye, assisted by Boyd Davis, in dances. On the screen will be "Tell It to Sweeney," co-starring Chester Conklin and George Bancroft.

Picture on Legion Paris Visit Is Under Way

Al Cooke and Kit Guard have put on overseas caps and entered into the serious business of making a rollicking comedy, "Legionnaires in Paris," under the direction of Arvid Gillstrom. These two comedians will be aided and abetted in this picture by Virginia Sale, sister of the famous vaudeville star, Chic Sale; Louise Lorraine and John Aason, eight-foot giant, who will be remembered best for his work with Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy."

"Legionnaires in Paris," an original story by Louis A. Shrecky, is rated as the comedy gem of the F-B-O program. It depicts the amusing adventures of two former members of the A. E. F. upon their return to Paris, nine years after the Armistice.

What! . . . you haven't tried Muffets?

Listen! Whole wheat, cooked, drawn out into ribbons of fine-spun wheaten threads. Three yards of this ribbon wound, layer upon layer, to muffin shape and size. Baked. Toasted butternut brown. Light as a crumpet. Crisp as potato chips.

Crunchy! That's what a Muffet is! . . . You eat one for breakfast—with sugar and cream, or with fruit added. You get vitamins, calories, roughage (bran), easy digestibility—and something mighty good to eat.

Is it any wonder people are saying we've given them the first really new breakfast dish in a generation?

And you can be the discoverer of them for your home! My, my! We envy you! The Quaker Oats Co., Chicago.

Volstead Law's Foes Spend $204,427

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—In its campaign to force modification of the Volstead law, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment spent $204,427 during the eight months ended last August 31, G. C. Hinckley, treasurer of the organization, reports to the clerk of the House of Representatives today.

The report was filed in accordance with the corrupt practices act of 1925. It gave a detailed account of expenditures and receipts. The latter totaled $206,119.

Expenditures were made chiefly for salaries, rentals and traveling expenses. Hinckley's report covered operations of all voluntary committees, the Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia offices, national headquarters at Washington, and New Jersey and Southern California divisions of the association.

ALWAYS THE BEST

Our creed is the same as in the ninety-seven years preceding—and as it will continue to be in the years to come—ALWAYS THE BEST IN MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

As a forcible illustration of our adherence to this rule, we direct the reader's attention to the VOSE Piano—a proud achievement of American musicians clothed with a tradition and historical background, such as only a few of the world's best makes can acclaim. Its reputation as an instrument of highest perfection has never been questioned.

"Teach the children to love Music and they will love their home"

The Vose Piano deserves the favorable consideration of everyone who desires a piano of beautiful tonal excellence.

Vose Pianos have always given utmost satisfaction—that's why we recommend the Vose.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Debuts—At Least One Nearly Every Day Next Month—Fill Social Calendar to Overflowing

IT IS interesting to sit back and watch the procession—to see girls who, it seems, were only yesterday absorbed in school books or playing with dolls step forth to make their bows to society. This year's list of these future hostesses is quite a long one, and almost every day next month will see at least one girl make her debut. And as for parties, they are piling up so fast that they almost overflow the social calendar.

The first of these "debbie" parties is scheduled for Friday afternoon, when Mrs. Edward J. House is giving a bridge at her house in Beechwood boulevard. The season's buds are to be the guests, and the party is being given for Mary Louise Johnston, Mary Mellon McClung and Anne King Scott. Mary Louise is, as you remember, coming out at a tea to be given by her mother, Mrs. William Terrell Johnson, of Forbes street, November 7, and Mary, who is the eldest daughter of the Samuel Alfred McClungs, of Murrayhill avenue, will make her debut Thanksgiving Day. Anne is a daughter of the J. King Scotts, of Devon road, and will be introduced at a tea dance to be given January 2 by her grandmother, Mrs. William Scott, of Devonshire street, in the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

Still another name has been added to the roster of debutantes with the announcement that Margaret Brainard, daughter of the Edward Heaton Brainards, of Woodland road, will "come out" at a tea to be given November 21 by her mother, in the Brainard home. Margaret, who is a Dobbs Ferry girl, is a sister of Mrs. Lawrence Allderdice and Mrs. Frederick K. Bullard and a niece of Mrs. W. Harry Brown, of Pittsburgh and Washington.

Mrs. Brown, by the way, left for Beverly, Mass., a few days ago, to spend a short time at her summer home, and after her return here probably will remain until after the holidays. She is famous as a hostess both in this country and in London, where she frequently has spent "the season," and it is more than likely that she will entertain here for her debutante niece.

Naturally, all the entertainments planned are not limited to debutante parties, and several social affairs are being planned in honor of the very young matrons. Among them is the dinner to be given Saturday night in the Pittsburgh Golf Club by the Julian Burdicks and their daughter, Frances, of Von Lent place. They are entertaining in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Hoster, whose wedding was such a pretty one last April in Calvary Episcopal Church. The young bride, it will be recalled, was Laura Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Merrill Wright, of Beechwood boulevard, who was a debutante herself just two or three seasons ago. The Hosters have been living in the Fifth Avenue apartments since they came back from their wedding trip, and this popular bride probably will be considerably entertained this winter.

A still more recent bride will be feted next week, when Mrs. Benjamin Page, of Colonial place, will give a tea, Thursday afternoon, November 3, in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, so that her friends may meet her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. Francis LeMoyne Page. The junior Mrs. Page is a newcomer here, although she lived not so very far away before she was married. She made many friends in Pittsburgh during her frequent visits while she was still Miss Isabel Priestly Lay, of Oil City. The Lay-Page wedding took place September 29 in Oil City, and the young people have just returned from their wedding trip. They are making their home at Fox Hill, near the Fox Chapel road.

MISS ELIZABETH DIERKS

DOUBLE QUARTET SINGS BEFORE JEWISH WOMEN

An important feature of yesterday's meeting of the Council of Jewish Women was the initial appearance of the council double quartet, which was organized this summer by Mrs. A. L. Balter and which gave a fine account of itself yesterday under the direction of Mrs. Rebecca Hepner with Mrs. Balter at the piano. The octet is composed of Mrs. Hepner, Mrs. Harry Stein, Mrs. Harry Sadler, Mrs. Robert Buka, Mrs. Charles Cuden, Mrs. Madeline Kahn Lewis, Mrs. Max Spann and Mrs. J. Lewis Palley.

"There are two new and important forces in the American theater today—the first the idea of metaphysical symbolism and the second the Negroid drama," said Miss Irma Kraft of New York, the speaker of the afternoon. The Negro, she went on in her very eloquent talk on "The Theater of Today," is a great, dynamic and artistic force in the theater and needs very little training, and the importance being given to Negro plays and to players commands attention. The New York stage is the market place of the dramatic world and playwrights everywhere are writing with this in their mind's eye. Aside from these observations Miss Kraft had little to say of the American stage, but she went into raptures of praise over many of the foreign playwrights and producers.

Bourdet's "The Captive" (one of the plays closed by the New York police) she termed "one of the most exquisite dramas of all times," and said that its author has refused to have anything more to do with America "until this country grows up." Bourdet, Miss Kraft said, is photographic and symbolic of what drama promises to be. Somerset Maugham is the constant force for what seems to be the conventional in the theater, but with rare exception has given nothing upon which can be built ethics for the future. John Galsworthy is England's one tangible contribution, she declared. All through Central Europe is a new, strange dynamic eruption of the thing called the theater, Miss Kraft went on, speaking of "the strange, violent, daring themes" and the "brilliant, daring, expressive young authors," adding that "The Teutonic mind is the deep, surging undercurrent in the world of the theater." Max Reinhardt's genius and his coming productions in America were commented on glowingly by Miss Kraft, who concluded her talk with a panegyric of Romaine Rolland, who, she said, is writing "the drama of the future."

"What Kind of Drama do We Want?" is the subject of the lecture to be given tonight by Clayton Hamilton before the Pittsburgh Drama League in Carnegie Lecture Hall. The lecture will carry out one of the chief aims of the league, to keep the members informed concerning current developments in the theater, and will be open to all who are interested in the cultural aspects of drama.

Mr. Hamilton has written five plays and several books of dramatic and literary criticism. During a recent tour of the United States he spoke to an aggregate audience of more than 1,000,000 people. For some time he has been associated with Walter Hampden, whom he assisted in the production of "Cyrano de Bergerac." He is secretary of "The Players," the famous club of actors and other artists which was founded by Edwin Booth and which, since the death of John Drew, the second president, has been under the direction of Walter Hampden as president. Mr. Hamilton is also a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and for 20 years has been recognized as one of the foremost American authorities on the drama.

Mrs. Albert P. Rightor, Mrs. R. J. Cleland, Mrs. H. H. Hoffman, Mrs. Galen C. Hartman and Mrs. Thomas S. Loring will be hostesses tomorrow for the luncheon which the drama department of the Congress of Clubs will give. Clayton Hamilton is the speaker. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, Congress president, will speak briefly and members of "My Maryland" company will entertain with songs.

A mother and daughter dinner was held last night in the rooms of Bethany Lutheran Church by the Dormont Mothers' Club. The program consisted of a play by the South Hills Repertory Company, solos by Mrs. H. A. Heineman and Richard Allison and trio numbers by Miss Helen Gleis, violin; Miss Olive Sickling, piano, and Miss Eleanor Thomson, saxophone.

"Some Current Illusions—Our Education for Citizenship" is the subject of the lecture which Norman Angell, English lecturer and author, will give under auspices of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in Schenley High School the night of November 16. This will be the first in a series of lectures which Mr. Angell will present under the league's auspices.

Mrs. W. P. Caldwell will be hostess for the meeting of the Women's Fortnightly Review of Elizabeth on November 3. Mrs. E. Wylie will take charge of a current events discussion, Mrs. C. C. Pearsall will discuss the international art exhibit and Mrs. David Kerr will give a talk on "The Madonna in Art."

At the Noon Business Women's Club of the First Presbyterian Church tomorrow, the Rev. Dr. H. Strock, of Greensburg, will speak. Solos will be sung by Miss Elizabeth Dittman, accompanied on the piano by Miss Anna Lene Harper.

For the benefit of Pennsylvania Memorial Home, Brookville, a card party will be held tomorrow afternoon in the home of Mrs. Cora Peterson, Hybla street, North Side.

November speakers before the College Club will include Dr. Mary Bidwell Breed, director of Margaret Morrison College, who will tell of the riot and strike in Vienna; Mrs. C. C. Wholey, who will conduct the members on a verbal trip through the Balkans; Dr. John W. To Bob Hair at 100, Short Skirts, Too

By Universal Service

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—"But I want to bob my hair! "Oh, very well then; I'll wait until I'm 100, but I can have short skirts now!"

It was with difficulty that Mrs. A. J. Murray, matron at the Laguna Honda home, could persuade Mrs. Esther Beale, her oldest patient, not to snip off the two white braids that hang down her shoulders and are tied with dainty lavender ribbons.

When she starts on her second century next Saturday, Mrs. Beale is going to be a flapper. She got out her very best dress, a plum-colored satin, and turned up the hem.

"Guess I'm old enough to wear short skirts if I want to," she declared brightly, puncturing the hem with tiny neat stitches. "Oh, I can't have it too short," she qualified. "I'm living with a lot of old ladies and I have to be sedate."

NAB 2 GIRLS IN $600 FRAUDS

Bad checks and forgeries netting them $600 were laid to Mildred Landman, 18, of 236 Yale avenue, and Anna Lyons, 19, of 5816 Holden street, by Detectives Harry McKelvey and Edward McGlough, who arrested the girls in Fifth avenue. Both girls, according to the officers, admitted they spent the money for fine clothing and to entertain friends.

At Central Police Station they gave their occupation as stenographers.

Ever-Ready Electric Washer

79.00

You can buy washers that are priced much, much more, yet get not nearly the sturdy, year-after-year dependability of the Ever-Ready. Let us explain what's inside this handsome cabinet, the advantages of the oscillator and the cylinder models.

Voss Electric Washer

You put the clothes into the copper tub (nickel-plated inside), turn the lever, and the oscillator action dashes the water back and forth like the waves of a choppy sea. Green-enamel finished semi-cabinet; adjustable swinging wringer. Just a few simple parts—but how efficiently those parts perform!

Rotarex Electric Ironer

The most advanced type of folding ironer, requiring only 18 inches of floor space when not in use! Not only powered but HEATED by electricity—and the touch of the knee turns on the current. So efficient that it seems almost human. Red, green, blue, grey.

Rotarex Electric Washer

A new fast-type machine that does the work in 7 or 8 minutes. Its solid copper tub is 6-sheet capacity. Handsomely finished in grey, blue, red or green. Latest type adjustable swinging wringer. We know of no machine of equal merit selling regularly under 155.00. Convenient Payments May Be Arranged.

Whereas A Girl Risks Her All To Get A Rich Society Husband

IT NEVER PAYS

by Gilbert Rogers

Mysterious Mark Trelaw, Crippled, Gives Margie A Strange Warning

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

MARGIE MARSH comes to New York with $1,000 and a wonderful education. She keeps house with four other girls, learns stenography, and decides after three years to marry. She fails to find her ideal and Dan Shevlin, a shrewd man of the world, offers to introduce her into smart society through a Mrs. Brooke. Margie recklessly writes and signs a note, dictated by Shevlin, saying she loves him and will never regret the six months she has spent with him. She calls on Mrs. Brooke and is tempted to give up the game, but Mrs. Brooke offers to help her and she finally decides to go on. Margie buys wonderful clothes which Shevlin pays for. She discovers Mrs. Brooke weeping bitterly and wonders why. They start for Newport.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

MARK TRELAW—Mrs. Brooke's brother—Margie had met him and been startled. Not a word had been said about Mark Trelaw, and he, too, was silent. A lean, bitter face, she thought. Then she had noticed his arm, held high, at a crooked angle, an arm that had been withered. A cripple—of course, that was it; that explained that look in his face, that uncanny watchful silence. At first wondering. But he came to meals, she kept thinking about him, talked rarely, stole away, hid somewhere. A library on the upper floor—his room. Mark Trelaw.

"What are you doing here?" It was a cold, harsh voice.

"Why—just—just—oh, nothing!" she ended.

"I don't mean this room, this house — I mean — up here."

"I'm visiting your sister." Why did he look at her like that? What was the matter, anyway?

He made a sudden gesture. "Better get away while you can," he said. "While you can. This house isn't everything you think it is. Better go." She stared. He gave a short, quick laugh. "Oh, you won't—no, you won't. You want pleasure. Very well. Only you'll remember what I've told you—some day."

He had gone, slipped away, leaving her speechless and trouble. What on earth did he mean by those cryptic things. Timidly she ventured to find out when Carlotta arrived breathlessly 10 minutes later.

"Oh, Mark—don't pay any attention to Mark. He's just a disappointed clergyman—he should have been a missionary. He's always full of dark, menacing promises about future punishment."

She spoke lightly, but a shadow of apprehension touched her eyes. Was she, too, afraid of Mark Trelaw?

"Carlotta!" Margie looked sombre. Her little head, poised for gayety, had a deeper beauty in its sudden gravity. She looked down at her soft sports costume, down to her smart, brown, mannish shoes. "Carlotta! You don't really think this is all wrong?"

"Wrong?"

"Oh, I want money—I don't want to work all my life. But—fifty dollars a week—that would have spelled luxury to me. I don't want too much."

"Oh, you will,' Carlotta said airily. "You're going to meet people who think they're starving on fifty thousand a year. As for me, I'm really dirt poor, shanty poor. Oh, if I had your chances!"

"But," Margie stammered, "I don't see—I mean honestly—you—you're so good looking. And you're a widow. And you know things—you're not inexperienced. So I don't see why you—"

Carlotta Brooke shook her head. "Don't you?" she said. "Well, I'll tell you why. Because I'm a fool, a fool. Only I know it."

She looked out of the window, looked at invisibility, and Margie knew she was thinking of Dan Shevlin. Dan Shevlin, with his cruelty, his cynical indifference. . . . It would be a terrible thing if she, too, fell in love with somebody like Dan Shevlin. And you never could tell.

She wanted to shake off her mood. And luncheon was over. Mark Trelaw had sat at the foot of the table, not looking at her, sitting there as if he had ceased to exist, as if he asked to be forgotten.

Margie took one of the dogs, a Great Dane, and followed the cliff walk, breathing in the sweet air, looking out at the sea now and then where it dissolved in spray on the brown rocks, looking now and then at the spacious lawns that reached up to the huge, splendid houses. . . .

"They're only people in them—like me!" she said to herself fiercely. "Just like me. Why, not a girl in an age has a chance like this one—I mustn't be afraid. I'm not doing anything wrong. Only why do I feel afraid just the same? Suppose Florence Clark and the Grahams could see me now? Of course they wouldn't believe their eyes."

Not all the houses were opened yet, some had the blank, sad look of places guarded only by caretakers. They stood proudly there, great, simple Georgian houses, houses that were reproductions of noblemen's estates, low-roofed, rambling places of stained wood, houses of stately marble.

They made her feel lonely and little and unimportant. And Carlotta was too busy now getting things ready, seeing that the machinery of her household was made smooth. But there were things to do as well as things to think about.

Waking early the next morning, for instance. And then a whim, a sudden longing to go in for a swim all alone in the clear green sea water. Swim and swim and splash around and come back for breakfast.

She walked in the first light, and her cheeks glowed with soft color. "I feel pretty," she said delightedly to herself. "And if you feel that you must be—even if you're not!" She began to run, conscious of being young and glad to think of all the big adventures that lay before her.

She had slipped skirt and sweater over a bathing suit. Now with no one to see her, she went down to the beach, an unfenced, unguarded beach, friendlier than Bailey's, she felt. The water was cold, but it made you laugh, and after you were in, it wasn't so bad, it was—why, it was delicious!

Not quite a half mile out there was a boat, a little ugly boat with a cabin built on it the wrong way, a shabby little boat that would have thanked anyone gratefully for a coat of paint. Margie swam out to it, drew herself up, dangled her toes in the water, lifted her arms to the rising sun.

"Hello," said a voice miraculously behind her. "I don't very often have visitors."

He was smiling at her. He had a brown face and light eyes. And a woolen shirt. And canvas trousers. And sneakers. He was about 27.

"I'm awfully sorry, I didn't know anyone was on board." She prepared to slide off in the water.

"Oh, don't—don't do that!" He looked alarmed.

"Why?"

"You'll get all wet."

"That's an awfully bad joke."

"Then why are you laughing at it?"

"I'm laughing at you."

"Have breakfast with me—I was just about to get some. Do you like your eggs done on both sides?"

They talked. He was Jerry Evesham. "My aunt's got a place back there. I'm the disreputable one of the family. That's to say, I haven't got any money. However—" And then afterwards, "And you of course have all the money in the world. Oh you rich, rich girls. How I'd like to take one of you on a cruise!"

"I can't help being rich, can I?" Margie asked. Queer how easy it was to talk to this man. Why, she'd be calling him Jerry in a minute. He looked as fresh and young as if he bathed 12 times a day. Nice eyes, too, a nice mouth.

She slid from the deck into the sparkling water. "So long!" "Come and see me again." "Do you live on this boat?" "O course not, but I'll live anywhere you say if you'll only come and see me." Things like that shouted across the water, half heard, not clearly said, but friendly things that promised, that meant more than they said.

She was still thinking about him when her bathing suit dried under the sun, and she was running back to the house again.

WILSON'S EFFORTS IN COLLEGE RECONSTRUCTION

Life and Letters of War President

Soliciting Money, Installing a New Academic System and Getting New Blood Into the Faculty Hard Work. His Loyal Helpers.

The startling demands of Wilson for millions of dollars with which to carry out his plans for the rehabilitation of Princeton University were described in yesterday's chapter of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sun-Telegraph. His great new ideas of success gradually were accepted and the rigid standards and discipline the new president introduced were seen to be essential.

Reorganizing Princeton

WILSON had often laughed at Dr. McCosh's shameless solicitation of funds for "me college." He had disparaged his own abilities in this direction. But once afire with his great project, he himself soon exceeded in "shamelessness" any of his predecessors. We have an example of his "assault upon the alumni" in his address at New York in December, 1902. He began to press the campaign in every direction. He had no adequate secretarial assistance—the university could not afford it. Students served part time.

He wrote out his letters and appeals in shorthand, sometimes transcribing them afterward on his own typewriter. They were not form letters, but each carefully personal. Not even his essays of former years were written with more laborious care than these letters to the rich of the earth. The yellowing memoranda of some of them remained in his files at his death — mute evidences of his toil. There were many rich men who were devoted graduates of Princeton; these he urged to greater generosity than ever before. He began a campaign to secure subscriptions by classes; and he reached out in every direction to men of philanthropic interests not connected with Princeton. He wrote on April 17, 1902, to Andrew Carnegie:

"My Dear Mr. Carnegie:

"We are forming plans for a new Princeton in which I venture to believe, you will be interested—if only because we mean to make the new Princeton like the old Princeton of John Witherspoon's day and yet of the modern age, with its new interests, studies, methods and undertakings. Witherspoon made Princeton an instrument of patriotic public service; we mean, if we can, to make her the same again.

"I have set forth the most immediate needs of the University in the report to the Board of Trustees, which I take the liberty of sending you with this letter. That report shows that, if we would make Princeton again the dominant power and influence she once was, we must attempt nothing less than her re-endowment. . . ."

Word Play With Carnegie

He developed his vision at length and eloquently, he appealed especially for the proposed graduate college, and while the endowment he was seeking did not come, yet Carnegie afterwards gave the money for the lake at Princeton that bears his name. On a later occasion, when Wilson pressed him for further help, Carnegie said:

"I have already given Princeton a lake."

Wilson responded instantly, "We needed bread and you gave us cake."

In this task Wilson could have made little progress had it not been for the devoted sympathy and support of his board of trustees, especially such men as Cleveland H. Dodge, David B. Jones, M. Taylor Pyne, John L. Cadwalader, C. C. Cuyler, Cyrus H. McCormick and others. Immense assistance also came later from the alumni organized in the committee of 50, with Cleveland H. Dodge as the chairman. But it was the fire of Wilson's own enthusiasm, Wilson's new plans, constantly expressed at alumni meetings, urged in voluminous correspondence, talked eagerly to men of means, that inspired the movement. Wilson was making Princeton interesting.

He regarded the reorganization of the course "as preliminary to all plans of the university for the next generation." Much as he longed to start his preceptorial system, everything must await the construction of a firm and orderly foundation.

He began therefore, in co-operation with an able committee of the faculty, the reconstruction of the curriculum. It proved a stupendous task, involving scores of meetings lasting through many months. Old walls of division between scientific and classical courses had to be pulled down, duplications abolished, the exact weight to be given to the new subjects of economics and politics determined, ancient hostilities and jealousies, nowhere sharper than in a college government, had to be reconciled and new departments organized. It was in many ways pioneer work, which proved of value not only at Princeton, but throughout the nation. Emphasis was laid upon "guided education" as contrasted with "free electives." Subjects of the freshman year were entirely prescribed and of the sophomore year largely so. The junior was to make a choice not "from a miscellany of studies but . . . from a scheme of related subjects."

A Brand New System

"We must supply the synthesis, and must see to it that, whatever group of studies the student selects, it shall at least represent the round rule, contain all the elements of modern knowledge . . . " said Wilson in his inaugural address.

At the beginning of the fall term (1904) the revolutionary new system went into operation. It was an instant success, "cordially received even by that arch conservative, the undergraduate himself."

In the summer of 1904 he retired with his family to the Canadian woods at Muskoka Lake, in Ontario—but watched with intense interest the campaign of Roosevelt and Parker for the presidency. He was hopeless regarding national politics—especially hopeless about his own Democratic party. Would the tide ever turn? He thought out a speech which he delivered that fall, urging the reorganization of the party by purging it of its unthinking radicals. He was at that time "near being a progressive Republican" and was certainly not at all "radical."

In early 1905 his health broke entirely and he went in February for an operation at Philadelphia—for hernia—and spent five weeks convalescing in Florida. But if his body was fragile, his mind worked unceasingly. He was now devoting every energy to the launching of his plans for a preceptorial system—"which for more than 12 years past have seemed to me the only effectual means of making university instruction the helpful and efficient thing it should be."

Underneath the preceptorial idea lay his own deepest convictions regarding education. He had thought it out in 1893 and 1894, had made it a purpose in the greatest of his educational addresses, that of 1896, had studied and deeply admired what he saw at Oxford and Cambridge in 1896 and 1899, had further outlined his purpose in his inaugural of 1902.

There was some doubt upon the part of certain of the more conservative trustees as to the launching of the new project before it could be properly endowed, but Wilson, having secured sufficient pledges to cover expenditures for three years, was anxious to go ahead. He attacked the task of securing the necessary tutors, or "preceptors," in the spring of 1905. Any college man knows the difficulty of finding even two or three really acceptable assistants within any reasonable time. Wilson was after 50 within six months. His files give evidence of the toil involved and the fire of energy and enthusiasm with which he undertook the work. He enlisted the aid of many other members of the faculty in seeking the men for their departments—Daniels, Hunt, Hibben, Vreeland, Dean Fine, Dean West and others. He corresponded searchingly regarding every candidate, held many interviews in which he communicated some of his own fire to the men he was seeking to interest. Several of them wrote afterward that they were coming to Princeton, as one expressed it, because "I shall be working under your personal guidance."

Forty-Seven Young Men

Somewhat to his own surprise he was able to launch the new system in the fall of 1905—it having been formally adopted at the June meeting of the board. By that time he had obtained 47 out of the 50 men required. They were all "proven scholars in their young maturity, men on the road to academic advancement," and they ranked as assistant professors. It was altogether a remarkable group of young men, many of whom distinguished themselves in later years, not only in their own chosen fields but in public life.

The new men threw themselves into their work with splendid zeal. Small groups met informally with the preceptors to discuss the reading they had done.

Wilson could say in his report to the trustees in the winter of 1905:

"I now have the great happiness of realizing that these reforms have already been effected with ease and enthusiasm, that Princeton is likely to be privileged to show how, even in a great university, the close and intimate contact of pupil and teacher, may, even in the midst of the modern variety of studies, be restored and maintained. Our object in so largely recruiting our faculty has been to take our instruction as much as possible out of the formal classrooms and get it into the lives of the undergraduates, depending less on lectures and written tests and more on personal conferences and intimate counsel."

He set forth the essentials of the plan:

"We are trying to get away from the idea, born of the old system of lectures and quizzes, that a course in any subject consists of a particular teacher's lectures or the conning of a particular textbook, and to act upon the very different idea that a course is a subject of study to be got up by as thorough and extensive reading as possible outside the classroom; that the classroom is merely a place of test and review, and that lectures, no matter how authoritative the lecturer, are no more than a means of directing, broadening, illuminating or supplementing the student's reading."

What he was seeking was the building of an institution that should be "all alive," devoted to the realities of learning.

New Way Popular

"And the gentlemen I have named are not the only preceptors. We are all preceptors."

He could say with joy that "the amount of work done by the undergraduates has increased amazingly." And this was due not to compulsion but to genuine interest.

On the whole the new system was immensely popular. The seniors sang:

"Here's to those preceptor guys,
Fifty stiffs to make us wise."

The preceptorial system, revolutionary as it was, stood the test of time. It worked. "It created a new Princeton." It was indeed expensive—so expensive that it caused many a cautious friend to shake his head—but it added greatly to the prestige of the institution. Princeton with its new president began to be looked to for educational leadership.

Years afterward President Hibben could say, in a deliberate judgment of this feature of Wilson's constructive work:

"This undertaking was a bold adventure on the part of Princeton. In the inauguration of this new policy Mr. Wilson showed the courage and persistence which throughout his life so conspicuously characterized his nature. There were added to the faculty at one time some 50 new members to take part in this preceptorial work. The new plan and policies attracted the attention of the educational world and all looked upon the new experiment with interest, many possibly with doubtful misgivings, but the experimental stage was soon passed and its marked success demonstrated its value for the university and secured for it a permanent place in our method of instruction."

Princeton today, indeed, stands at the forefront of American universities in its progress toward the "new education." It has built upon the foundation laid by Woodrow Wilson until "spontaneous intellectual life is no longer an uncommon phenomenon in the undergraduate body." Faculty and students are knit together as never before, every teacher has become a preceptor, students are turning to intellectual interests. Wilson's ideals after 20 years are being truly realized.

The narrative of Woodrow Wilson's career at Princeton will approach the crucial stage tomorrow. The historic controversy is approaching, and Wilson begins to find opposition when he gets to the point of democratizing the university.

Mysterious Mark Trelaw, Crippled, Gives Margie A Strange Warning

you don't need to say anything, or do anything—you look everything. Imagine not needing any color, and only a dab of powder! If Tubby Wells doesn't fall at your feet with a crash! . . ."

Carlotta was a little excited. Tea today, with Margie meeting the first challenge of critical eyes. And a letter from Dan Shevlin, saying he would arrive on the week-end.

"You'll have had seven proposals before he gets here. Why, Tubby Wells himself . . ."

Tubby Wells, always Tubby Wells, a really eligible bachelor—the name had been dinned into Sally's ears. But she shrank from something a little too hard in Carlotta's viewpoint. "He hasn't a bad habit in the world. No one can drink so much and yet be so presentable. Of course he'll have to take out his checkbook to get rid of some chorus girls—but really not a bad habit in the world!"

Was there an unconscious irony in Carlotta's flippant tones? Her face was serious enough. . . .

An afternoon when spring dared to come out in the open and show itself. The windows were open, letting in a rush of soft, delicately scented air. The sea was in it, and the fragrance of many carefully-tended gardens.

They came in twos and threes then half a dozen at one time, jumping out of roadsters, leaving golf clubs behind them, then one or two stragglers. Healthy most of them, yet not very contented-looking, aimless perhaps . . . Admiral Vining, a fierce old man with fierce old eyes, and Miss Vining, Josie Browne, and Clementina Dalroy, Jack Walden, the Hadley-Gordons, a mixed group of mixed ages.

"Oh, how d'you do, how d'you do, hello—Carley, you're getting thin—Miss Marsh—Carley, I'm famished."

Their voices blended and rose together in a spirit of ease and indifference, the voices of those, Margie thought, who have never had to fight anything, who can take everything for granted always.

And how beautifully they were dressed. Carlotta was right in buying clothes as she had. It would have been easy to look shabby here. Simple things, exquisitely simple, that came from Paris. And on the men London clothes, tweeds, the odour of good tobaccos. You had to rub your eyes and look twice before you saw how plain the women really were, and that the men weren't really distinguished. . . . Margie felt frightened nevertheless.

"Why doesn't someone point a finger at me, and say, 'You—I know all about you—you used to typewrite in the Pantheon Finance Company. How dare you come here and pretend to be one of us? . . .'"

Only Carlotta's faint, quizzical whisper half reached her. "Most charming, unspoiled little thing you ever saw—spent all her life in a French convent, my dear. Thinks bridge is something to cross a stream."

"What about bridge, Carley. And I could do with some tea—about two fingers of Scotch and club soda. Vichy gives me heart failure."

Quick little looks darting at her, pretending not to see her, cold looks that sized her up, that retreated with a little unpleasantness—at least three women there hated her, and Margie knew she was a success.

She trifled with a tiny cake and a cup of Ceylon. Everyone was talking cheerfully, helping himself, in a spirit of absolute informality—she certainly hadn't expected this!

Then the bridge tables came out, and while some lay back on the antique davenport, talking of golf, scores lazily, or murmuring gossip about people she did not know, Margie saw a little group with eyes grown suddenly feverish and serious, settle themselves for play. And she sat alone, rather miserably alone. A success? She was a miserable failure. "They know I'm different—they hate me because of that. Oh dear, I wish I—I wish—"

The butler had crossed the hall. A car had drawn up on the gravel.

"Hello, Tubby. Good old Tubby. Here's Tubby!"

"Do sit down and talk to my little friend, Tubby. She doesn't know anybody. Tell her all the bad things you know about all of us. Except me, of course."

Carlotta returned to her cards, but Tubby Wells' eyes followed her with a gleam of cold amusement, the look of someone who has long since discovered the reason for his popularity among unmarried girls, a wary, wise, skeptical look.

Margie met his gaze as he swung back, dropped into a chair at her side, hugging his knee. Tubby—well, you just knew he should be called that. Even the beautiful, beautiful suit that he wore had been cut to make him look slim and elegant and yet failed. And his face was too red, though he wasn't bad-looking. A toothbrush mustache, and as for being young—he was so close to 40 you couldn't squeeze a year between!

"Don't know anybody, eh? You're lucky. Wish I didn't."

Tubby Wells—never, not if he were the last man on earth. Once and for all Margie knew that. She compressed her lips on the certainty of it.

"Then why bother to become acquainted with me?"

He bent low, heavy stare upon her. "Thought you rather wanted me too."

To Be Continued.

Dicky Makes a Mysterious Visit to the Strangers' Shack on the Hill

I SPENT an anxious hour during Dicky's jaunt over the hill to see the men who had taken the Grimsey shack and who had caused so much excitement for us in the morning when their savage dog had sprung at Jerry Ticer.

My uneasiness was not lessened by the remembrance that one of the men, the red-bearded and red-haired one, had frightened Miss Lincoln, of The Larches, during our afternoon call upon her. That they were undesirable neighbors, to use the mildest term, was patent, and knowing Dicky's hot temper, I was afraid that the strictures he meant to make about the dog might precipitate unpleasant—even dangerous consequences.

If I could have shared my fear with someone else it would have helped me, but I am not a whiner, and besides I felt instinctively that Dicky would not wish me to speak of his expedition. Why I had this impression I could not tell. It was made up partly of his queerly excited demeanor when he had first caught sight of the red-bearded man, and of his odd glance at me when I had asked him if the man had had time to get back to the shack. That he had some theory of his own regarding the new neighbors I was as sure as that he would wish no comment upon it until he was ready himself to discuss it.

My imagination, however, was not curbed, and it circled round and round my husband's odd behavior when he had seen the red-bearded man. I knew that Dicky had had many queer experiences during his work as an ace in the American flying corps during the World War. It had included months in a German prison, and I wondered if Dicky had not recognized in the red-headed man some acquaintance, hostile or otherwise, of that strenuous time.

This seemed the only plausible explanation of his undoubted excitement upon seeing the man, but at the best it was a far-fetched explanation, and for the last few minutes before his return I was so tensely nervous that I sat with my fingers clenched into my palms in a mighty effort not to betray my state of mind to the others.

That he had had no fracas with the men, I saw as he came out on the veranda where we were again gathered. But I had no opportunity to question him concerning them, even if I had felt free to do so, for Junior, but recently awakened from his nap, climbed on his knee and demanded—and received—his father's full attention until dinner time.

One thing was certain, I saw as I furtively watched him during dinner, his interview with our queer neighbors had not angered him nor had it aroused his anxiety. He was in the highest possible spirits, and even his rancor against me on account of my proposal to invite Philip Veritzen down to the east end of the island appeared completely to have disappeared.

But there was something about his behavior which puzzled me, although I think no one else noticed it. Frequently he would glance toward me with such amusement mirrored in his eyes that I wondered if something concerning me was giving him such mirth. And through all the brilliant jesting talk, with which he enlivened the dinner table, he had the air of a man who was enjoying a huge joke that he did not intend to share with anybody.

I think we all shall remember that dinner. I never have seen Dicky in better form, and in the expressive language of his dearest friend, Alfred Durkee, "when the old Dicky bird is going strong there hain't nobody kin pass him." If laughter adds zest to food, we should have considered our viands ambrosia that night, for it was ever-present.

It was after Junior had gone to bed that Dicky came to the library where I was going over some suggestions which I meant to make to Philip Veritzen when I should keep my appointment with him the next day.

"I suppose you want to know what I found out about those men," he said, still with the queer air of possessing a jest which he was determined no one should share.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, October 27

A MOST auspicious planetary rule, according to lunar transits with benign planets, should make this a day of accomplishment and happiness.

The trine aspect to Jupiter should prosper all undertakings, expanding business and professional activities and assist finances. It might be well to be on guard against subtle deception in dealing with corporations.

The friendly Venus position should bring pleasant and flourishing conditions into personal affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a prosperous and flourishing year, with gratifying activities in business, finance and the professions. Also domestic, social and affectional contacts will be pleasant and harmonious.

A child born on this day should be versatile, clever, ambitious, noble and gracious. It should succeed in almost any line of endeavor, politics, business, finance, literature or art. It will be popular and well liked and should attain good position in life.

Notable Nativity: Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States.

DR. CONTI KILLED BY STROKE AT PARTY RALLY

Stricken with apoplexy yesterday while attending the noon meeting of the Independent party in Fourth avenue, Dr. Gaetano Conti, 59, well-known physician and prominent in Italian-American circles, died last night in Mercy Hospital.

He was born in Italy and was a graduate of the University of Naples. He came to this country 33 years ago and began practicing medicine, locating at 29 Chatham street, where he remained until his death. He was a member of the Allegheny Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, Sons of Italy, Italian Club and St. Paul's Cathedral parish. He leaves his widow, three sons, Dr. Eugene Conti, Reis Conti and Richard Conti; four daughters, Madeline, Alice, Virginia and Catherine; his father, Ignatius Conti; one brother, Dr. Giacomo Conti and two sisters, Mrs. Paul Quiteri and Miss Giovianni Conti.

DRUGGISTS CONVENE IN GREENSBURG TOMORROW

MRS. IVY GILL AND JACK FELLOWS, HER TRAINER

A few days after the hoax swim of Dr. Dorothy Logan, but before the hoax was exposed, Mrs. Ivy Gill, of Sheffield, England, a 24-year-old typist, swam the English Channel from France to Dover in 15 hours 9 minutes. With the confession of Dr. Logan that her swim was false, Mrs. Gill's backers have issued a challenge to all swimmers, male or female, to race across the channel. Photo shows Mrs. Gill with her trainer, Jack Fellows.

ROAD SO POOR, MUST CARRY DEAD

It is necessary for pallbearers to carry caskets a half mile on their shoulders in winter to reach the Catholic cemetery along the Thorn Run road, the Rev. P. J. Healy, pastor of St. Joseph's church, Coraopolis, told the county commissioners yesterday in putting forth the plea of a delegation from Moon township and Coraopolis that the road be hard surfaced. The road extends from the Narrows Run road to Beaver road and in winter is impassable. A survey of the road was ordered.

Residents of South Fayette and Collier townships asked the commissioners that the Oakdale-Federal road, two and a half miles long, be graded and red-dogged. Thirty families are shut in during the winter. It is a short cut from the southwestern end of the county to Pittsburgh.

ETNA OFFICIAL STABBED

Stabbed three times in a holdup by four Mexicans in Bridge street, Etna, last night, William Swope, 60, of 77 Locust street, Etna, superintendent of the borough water and light department, is in a serious condition at his home and two suspects are being held by Sharpsburg police.

Swope told police he was on his way home when accosted by the four Mexicans, who demanded money. He argued with the bandits, Swope said, and a struggle ensued, during which he was stabbed. The approach of an automobile frightened Swope's assailants as he fell to the street and they fled without obtaining any loot. The men arrested are Louis Ronchez, 27, and Mike Sancho, 25, of West Etna.

FOG HAMPERS TRAFFIC

The dense fog which hampered both automobile and rail traffic this morning was reported by the railroads to be widespread in Western Pennsylvania. Trains moved slowly in consequence.

Early passenger trains from the West were held up on the Eleventh street bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad, but this was said to have been due to the stalling of a shifting engine, which tied up the interlocking system for half an hour.

V-shaped crevices form THE DANGER LINE

If you will look at your teeth in a mirror, you will see that the gums thin out to very fine delicate edges where they join the teeth. At this union of the teeth and gums is that place recognized by dental authorities as The Danger Line.

It is at The Danger Line that the most treacherous forms of tooth decay and gum infections find their beginning. For in the tiny V-shaped crevices acids form that attack the tooth enamel and irritate the gums. You must neutralize these acids if you want to preserve a healthy mouth.

Squibb's Dental Cream, made with 50% of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, will bring you this important protection. For every time you use it, tiny particles of the Milk of Magnesia are forced into every place where acids form, neutralizing them and safeguarding your teeth and gums. You will like using it. A large tube for 40c—everywhere.

"We had four men on the job at Midnight"

IN terse, matter-of-fact phrases, the reports in Westinghouse service shops throughout the country tell of countless men on countless jobs in jiffy time.

Here's an engineer who drove 140 miles in four hours to repair the motor for a main pump in a city water supply system.

Here's an engineer who left his pipe and paper at 10:30 Sunday morning, was in a plant at 11:30, removed a motor to the Westinghouse Service Shop, called in a machinist and an armature winder, raised the coils, retaped them, installed new bearings and had the motor back in service when the plant started at 7:30 Monday morning.

Amundsen Walks Out On Party; Sails

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—His departure unexplained, Capt. Roald Amundsen was on his way to Norway today leaving behind a cancelled lecture tour and an explorers' club medal which was to have been awarded him at a banquet in his honor Saturday evening.

"Am sailing today. Sorry I can't be with you," said telegrams sent, before he left on the Bergensfjord, to Lee Keedick, lecture bureau manager, and to Rudolph Kersting, secretary of the Explorers' Club.

As a result of Capt. Amundsen's departure, more than 200 prospective guests and members of the Explorers' Club were notified by wire that the dinner and presentation of the medal had been postponed indefinitely.

Maj. Gen. A. W. Greely, U. S. A., was to have made a special trip from Washington to deliver the presentation speech. Speakers at the dinner were to have been men famous in exploration and aviation fields, including Commander Richard E. Byrd and his pilot in the North Pole flight, Floyd Bennett, and Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, skipper for Rear Admiral Peary.

A Message to Underweight Men and Women

The one supremely good health-building tonic that is also the one great weight producer known to modern science the country over is McCoy's Tablets.

They build flesh where flesh is needed—sunken cheeks, neck and chest—and many a man and woman, skinny and scrawny, have thanked McCoy's after a few weeks' treatment for the decided improvement in looks and figure.

Many times the increase in weight is astonishing—one exceedingly thin woman gained 10 pounds in 22 days.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty-cent boxes of McCoy's Tablets or 2 one-dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

The name McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets has been shortened—just ask for McCoy's Tablets at May's Drug Stores or any drug store in America.

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

TAKE IT FROM ME—

NO MAN can succeed brilliantly either as a lover or as an author unless he can ignore facts and enlarge on FANCY without a twinge of conscience.

When anybody speaks of "luck in love," a woman thinks proudly of the man she has just caught—a man thinks prayerfully of the woman he has just "uncaught."

* * *

Oh, yes, Mirabella, you may never have had a complex, a Rolls Royce, a divorce, high blood-pressure or a family scandal, and still be a "lady," if your manners aren't too polished.

HELEN ROWLAND

In love, it is far less important to keep a man chastened than to keep him chasing?

A girl may be expert at picking out a frock that won't run, fade, wear out or lose its style and charm—but she is not always so lucky in picking out that kind of a husband.

Some husbands give a wife about as much attention as they give the dining-room clock—just glance at her casually morning and evening to see that she is still on the job, and "running along" as usual.

The world is surely growing younger! No man or woman under sixty muses on those romantic "yesterdays" any more, as long as he or she has the strength to plan a sentimental "tomorrow."

* * *

After a bitter lover's quarrel, a woman can more easily forgive a man for cutting her dead than for treating her with perfectly cheerful amiability..

Golf is a magic madness which turns a sane man into a monomaniac, an old man into a boy, and a Don Juan into a woman-hater.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Guarding Infants Whose Mothers Are Tubercular

ON THE receiving stand where we had gone to greet Lindbergh, I met my old friend, Dr. S. A. Knopf. The first time we ever met was many years ago, when the Governor of Michigan had appointed me on the tuberculosis commission and we were visiting the various tuberculosis institutions in the East. One of my colleagues insisted that we should call on Dr. Knopf, a pioneer in the study and prevention of this dread disease.

DR COPELAND

"What is new in your specialty?" I asked the other day.

The doctor told me of his recent studies in the prevention of tuberculosis in infancy and childhood. What can be so important?

Before going further let me say at once that it is not necessary for a child to have tubeculosis because its parents had it. It must be remembered, however, that this disease attacks youngsters much more commonly than it does adults.

If either parent is tubercular the young child is in danger, not of an inherited tuberculosis, but of an infection in early life from contact with the parent. The disease is infectious and the infant is particularly susceptible to it.

Tubercular persons should not marry. If they do marry and a little life is on the way before it is discovered that one of the prospective parents has tuberculosis, plans must be made before birth for the protection of the infant. If it is the mother, she must not think of nursing her baby.

Just as soon as the discovery is made that the pregnant mother has tuberculosis she should have the best of care, in a sanatorium, if possible. For her own sake, too, she should have the best of care after the baby comes.

We will suppose the baby is born—then what? Dr. Knopf says:

"To procure for the child a healthy foster mother is the ideal way of saving its life. The tubercular mother, of course, should never nurse her baby, and close contact of mother and child must be avoided. Fondling and kissing are out of the question, and even the presence of the infant or other children in the sickroom must be avoided."

This is a sad verdict to give a loving mother, but it is the very fact she is a loving mother that will make it possible to carry out this wise instruction. I fully agree with Dr. Knopf that this is the one and only course to pursue.

Studies are being made in the inoculation of newborn infants to protect them against tuberculosis. Prof. Calmette in France, as well as Dr. Park and his associates in the New York Board of Health, is doing a wonderful work for humanity in this field. This method of vaccination is simple and harmless, the protecting agent being given by the mouth.

There are certain rules of hygiene that must be observed if others in the same family or in the community are to be protected against tuberculosis. When these rules are strictly followed the tubercular person is not a menace.

If you know you have tuberculosis or suspect it, see your doctor or the health officer right away. By taking early precautions you will get well and nobody else will be endangered.

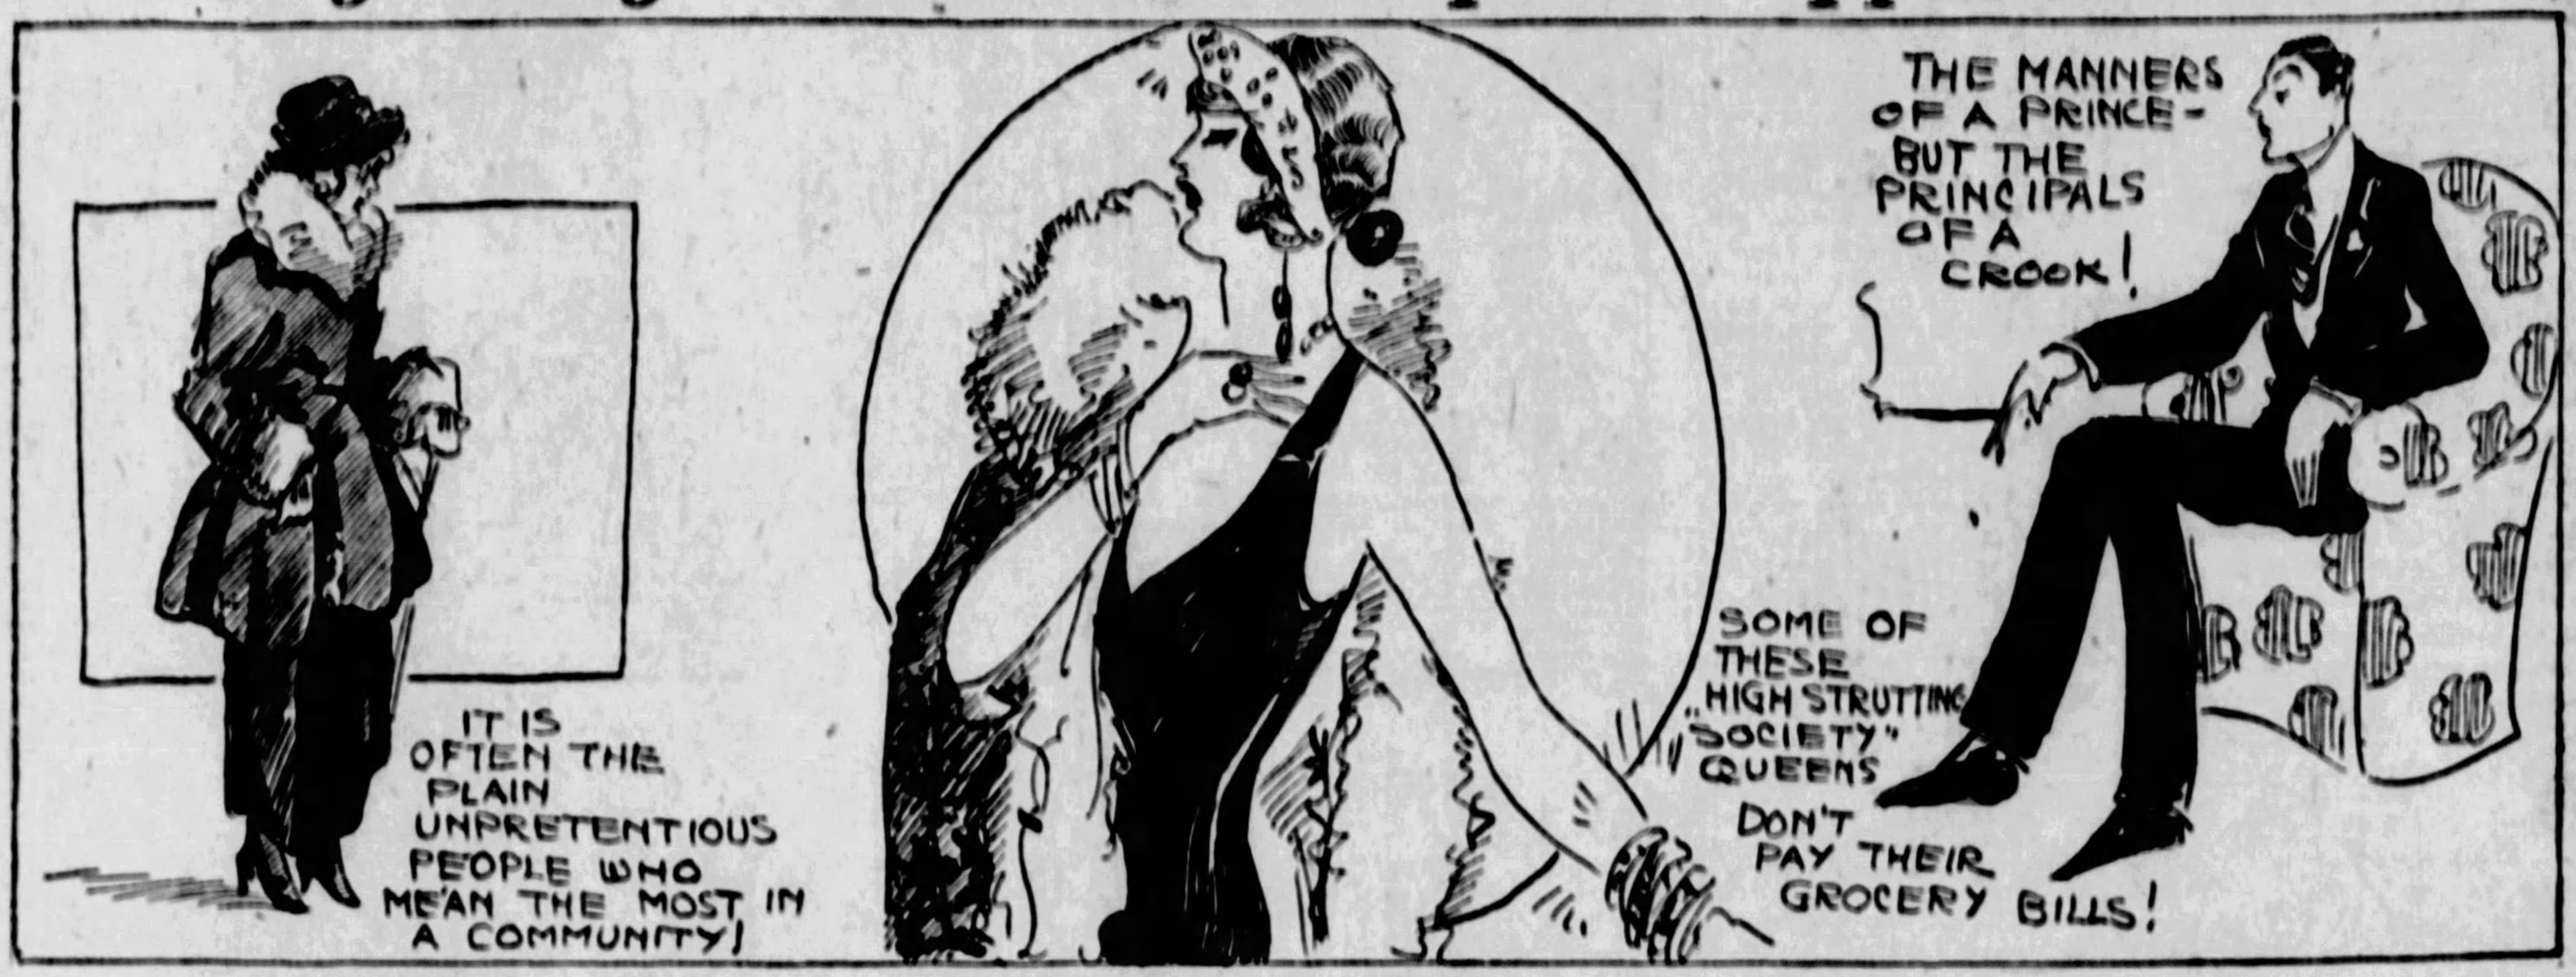
Fay King Warns of Deceptive Appearances



IT IS OFTEN THE PLAIN UNPRETENTIOUS PEOPLE WHO MEAN THE MOST IN A COMMUNITY!
SOME OF THESE "HIGH STRUTTING "SOCIETY" QUEENS DON'T PAY THEIR GROCERY BILLS!
THE MANNERS OF A PRINCE - BUT THE PRINCIPALS OF A CROOK!

By FAY KING.

PEOPLE who place too much confidence in manners and appearances often find themselves deceived.

The gift of gab, a good supply of glad rags and a superior manner have been valuable tools in the hands of people who live by their wits.

Many a man who has the manners of a prince has the principles of a crook, and many a woman who sweeps into a community with a society flare has suddenly left the butcher and baker and candlestick maker holding the sack!

It is the plain, steady unpretentious people who pay their bills, live within their means and conduct themselves in a worthy manner that mean most to any community!

People who are real, in no matter what walk of life, are plain and unpretending!

They do not have to go out of their way to make an impression.

Beware of the people who are forever harping upon their distinguished connections.

Beware of the people who are always insinuating their great wealth and influence. Beware of the people who are always referring in such familiar terms to prominent people; the people who seem to know no one but the rich and the famous.

People who talk and act to make a marvelous impression are seldom what they would seem.

Look out for the people who are always so anxious to inform you of the fortunes they have lost, or so anxious to let you in on the fortunes they are going to have.

I have discovered that the less people say the more people know; the more people have, the less they want it known, and the more people are, the less they brag about it!

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Hopeless in Love

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column and enjoy it very much. Others have succeeded in following your advice, so I think I will try it. I am a girl 18 years old and not hard to look at. I am in love with a fellow 21 years old. I went to his house to see his sister and was introduced to him. Love at first sight. My mother doesn't allow me to go with fellows, but I go out with them anyhow. I am rather popular with the opposite sex. I do not drink or smoke. Do not consider me a wallflower, because I go to dances, theaters, swimming parties, beach parties, etc. I went out riding with this fellow one evening and he tried to kiss me and I wouldn't let him, and now I regret it. He came up to my girl friend's one evening and I happened to be there. He rode me home and seemed very cool. Through jealously on his sister's part he never came back. Now I want to know how I can win his love back, as I love him dearly and I think he cared an awful lot for me before we separated. Do not tell me to give him up, as this would seem impossible for me to do. Shall I telephone him? If I do his brother always answers and pretends he is my boy friend.

HOPELESSLY IN LOVE.

There really isn't anything for you to do in the matter, my dear. He knows he is welcome if he cares to call on you, and if he doesn't make the effort you cannot force the issue. Wait a while and if he really likes you he will come back of his own accord.

Questioning Sue

DEAR MISS GALE:

Who should speak first after a quarrel if both parties are guilty? If a girl is not permitted callers at her home what should she tell a boy, and will he think her young and childish? Do you think dimples are a great asset to attract the male sex?

QUESTIONING SUE.

Be the generous and forgiving one, my dear, and speak first. In my opinion there is nothing to be ashamed of in telling a boy you are not permitted to have callers. The truth is the best explanation. Dimples are attractive, of course, but not a necessary part of beauty.

WHY WOMEN LOOK FADED

Science says long retention of wastes in bowels invites system poisoning, which doctors call Toxemia—it being the underlying cause of unsightly skin blemishes that ruin complexion and make folks look faded and old. Any one of forty symptoms may mean oncoming Toxemia—languidness, backache, worry over trifles, nervousness, sleeplessness, poor appetite, any miserable feeling—it's time to act! Take Partola—in pleasant, mint-flavored, mild acting, laxative tablets. Rid your system of poisonous wastes, then watch skin clear up, complexion become radiantly beautiful, youthful appearance return. Any good druggist sells regular box 30c, double size 60c.

SHE didn't intend to put anybody to trouble or expense. She went "shopping" that afternoon. Saw something at Blanks that looked interesting and had it sent out. Liked two sport hats; didn't know whether they would do, but asked to have them sent. There were two pairs of shoes that might possibly be used, but one pair was very, very doubtful. Sent them, too.

She didn't intend to put anybody to trouble or expense.

Quite likely she didn't know, or didn't think, but the panel on the left shows the operations that eventually had to be carried out.

There are times when it is fair and proper to have the "goods sent on approval." Reputable stores are glad to cooperate under such circumstances, with the privilege of returning promptly.

And, of course, there should never be any hesitation in sending back articles that are defective, or wrong size, color or material but the stores ask that you assist in reducing the mounting volume of returns by more careful selection before having goods sent which, of course, will reduce unnecessary returns. Obviously, the savings will eventually be reflected in the lowered price of goods.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

PROMOTER "Cash and Carry" Pyle, whose next venture, following the starring of Red Grange and Suzanne Lenglen, Mary Browne and others on professional tours, will be holding of an international foot race from Los Angeles to New York starting on March 3, is trying to feature William Hartz, the English runner and a prospective contestant in the coast-to-coast grind as an entrant who smashes all records for age in a contest at pedestrianism over such a long course.

But Pyle's tales of the remarkable ground-covering ability of Hartz at the age of 63 will cause no excitement among veteran American sport followers.

ON THE contrary they probably will only yawn over the Hartz stories when they recall some of the feats of Edward Payson Weston and Dan O'Leary, whose ages at the time of some of their achievements would make Hartz look like a mere kid.

True, they were walkers whereas Hartz is a runner, but they broke records for the coast-to-coast trip on foot when they were far past Hartz's age.

Consider some of Weston's walking feats: In 1910 he walked from Los Angeles to New York, a distance of 3,483 miles in 77 days, not walking on Sundays, starting February 1 and finishing May 2, and while en route on March 15, he celebrated his seventy-second birthday anniversary. There's a mark for Hartz to shoot at, with an advantage of nine years.

One year earlier, when he was 71, Payson walked from New York to San Francisco, 3,895 miles, in 105 days from March 15 to July 14, resting on Sundays. When he was almost 69 years old he walked from Portland, Me., to Chicago, 1,234 miles, in 59 days, resting on Sundays. His longest distance covered in one day was 95.3 miles. At the age of 75 he walked 1,546 miles from New York to Minneapolis, from June 2 to August 2, 1913.

AND there is Dan O'Leary, too, not only one of the most remarkable walkers of all times and a champion in his heyday, but still going at the age of 81.

Born in Clonakelty, Ireland, June 29, 1846, O'Leary came to this country on March 7, 1864, and since his first arrival here he has crossed the Atlantic Ocean 44 times. Since he first appeared in walking races in Chicago in 1871 he has walked 105,000 miles in competition, or more than four times the distance around the world.

O'LEARY defeated Weston in a six-day race at Chicago in 1875, covering 503 miles to Weston's 451½ miles. He also defeated Weston in two other six-day races, one in London in 1877, doing 520 miles to his opponent's 510, and the other in San Francisco, in 1880, when he walked 525 miles to Weston's 499.

In 1878, Dan won the Sir John Astley belt and the championship in a six-day go-as-you-please, covering 520½ miles and defeating a field of 20 Irish, English and Scotch runners.

O'Leary celebrated his 79th birthday anniversary in 1925 by walking 100 miles in Chicago in 23 hours and 54 minutes to win a wager of $100.

SO IT will be seen that Hartz's entry in the coast-to-coast race at the age of 63, even if he finishes, will not equal the feats of Weston and O'Leary in the matter of age as applied to pedestrians.

The remarkable physical condition of O'Leary after walking 105,000 miles in competition, was attested by a few remarks made by Dan himself in New York during the recent world series.

DAN related that some time earlier he had purchased a pair of spectacles of the highest quality, but they had accidentally been broken.

"Then I bought this pair I am now wearing," he said, "and they suit me finely, too, though I paid only 10 cents for them at a bargain counter. However, I won't need them very long, as my eyes are becoming so much stronger that I'll soon be able to throw the glasses away." And he's 81!

THE basketball team with a strong major league baseball flavor, that is headed by Gabby Hartnett, star catcher of the Chicago National League Club, is being booked by Johnny Freund of Pittsburgh for a tour soon after Christmas.

Several major league baseball players are on Hartnett's team, which works out of Boston, and among them is Chester Nichols, former Pirate pitcher, who is looked upon as one of the real stars of the floor game up Boston way.

IT IS not surprising that Heinie Groh, though not yet officially released by Pittsburgh, was given permission to grab the best job that presented itself for 1928, as indicated by the announcement that he has signed to manage the Charlotte (N. C.) club of the South Atlantic Association.

Groh himself knows as well as every one else that his big league playing days are over. He was picked up by the Pirates only for emergency duty, or as an "insurance policy" in 1927, and there wasn't a chance of his being retained for next year.

IT WAS a fortunate break for Heinie when he hooked up with the Buccaneers, as in addition to drawing a major league salary for the remainder of the season he came in for a full share of the Pirates'

TAD LIKELY TO STAY ANOTHER YEAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(INS.)—T. A. D. Jones, who has been head coach of the Yale football team for a dozen years, may not surrender the reins at the close of this season as announced, according to apparently well authenticated reports in Yale alumni circles in New York today.

Jones announced his expected retirement at the close of the 1927 campaign, a month ago, but it now is known that he has about determined to devote at least one more year to coaching the Blue eleven.

After Yale's defeat by Georgia it became an open secret that Jones contemplated sticking on for another year and the Blue's victory over Brown did not change this revised decision. Since the Army game last Saturday when Yale showed clearly that it was one of the most powerful elevens that has ever worn the Blue, Jones has been deluged with congratulatory messages, among them scores urging that he remain in charge of the team.

Those who have been close to football affairs at New Haven believe that Jones never actually intended to fade out completely from the football picture at Yale and that he planned to occupy a place similar to that held by Walter Camp, who for twoscore years was Yale's "football dictator."

COAST-TO-COAST RUNNER HERE

Entering the final lap of his transcontinental run from Los Angeles to New York in an effort to break the record set by Edward Payson Weston, William E. Busch, the "Spirit of Boston," arrived in Pittsburgh this afternoon, finishing the first 2,779 3-10 miles in 56 days.

Busch left Wheeling, W. Va., last night, arriving early this afternoon in Dormont, from where he was escorted to the Fort Pitt Hotel by Motorcycle Policeman Roy W. Schaefer. His father, Oscar Busch, an employe of The Sun-Telegraph, and his manager, Timothy L. Kenney, greeted him on his arrival at the hotel.

Tomorrow morning Busch will leave on the final lap of his race to New York, planning to complete the trip in seven days.

"DO YOU know," asks Mr. David Buck, "some of the stuff you write has given me a pain more than once? At one time you are knocking a baseball player and the next time you are boosting him. Now you know or you should know that this is decidedly 'small town stuff.' You never see any of the New York scribes panning any of the players. If they can't say a good word for them they don't say anything at all. Now, take the case of Earl Smith, the Pirate catcher. The panning you gave him was clear out of order. And then you had the nerve to put in a good word for him a little later. If it is only space you are trying to fill it doesn't speak well for you that you can't find something better to write about. Some people may call me a crank for even writing to tell you what I think about it, but when I have anything to say I believe in saying it whether the person to whom I say it likes it or doesn't like it. Now if this is your way of boosting the home town it is a mighty poor way to go about it."

HAVEY BOYLE.

THE forthright and straightforward Mr. Buck and this writer simply have studied under different men. Mr. Buck's notion, apparently, is that once one finds fault with a figure then the book is closed, forever, and that figure must forever stand condemned for that particular fault. My own notion is directly opposed to this and for this reason one can naturally see why there is a conflict between Mr. Buck and this writer. It is my notion that Earl Smith, for instance, was grievously wrong in taking a sock at Dave Bancroft, the Boston manager, but that because he did this Smith was utterly incapable of a good act is something I can't believe. Any system of justice that does not weigh the good with the bad must be a little faulty.

ON THE side of Mr. Buck's criticism of criticism I must disagree again. The idea that if one can't say anything good about a person one shouldn't say anything

HERRMANN RESIGNS AS RED PREXY

CINCINNATI, Oct. 26.—August "Garry" Herrmann, active and popular president of the Cincinnati baseball club for the past 25 years, late today resigned that position and was succeeded by C. J. McDiarmid, secretary of the club for the past eight years.

Mr. Herrmann in his resignation stated that his continuing ill-health demanded his retirement and the immediate selection of a successor. Mr. Herrmann stated he expects to travel in the South and West in an effort to recuperate his strength.

The retiring president, with George B. Cox and the two Fleischmanns, Julius and Max, bought the club from John T. Brush in August, 1902. Mr. Herrmann was chairman of baseball's supreme court until U. S. Judge Landis took up its leadership.

Herrmann has long been a leading factor in baseball and for many years was chairman of the National Baseball Commission, which antedated

Mother Doesn't Want Kearns To Make Up

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—The New York American today says Jack Kearns has told friends his mother doesn't want him to make up with Jack Dempsey.

Mother Kearns is said to have once idolized Dempsey—"Jack," she called him, while she referred to her son as "Kearns."

When the report was circulated that Dempsey wanted to patch up affairs, the mother wrote Kearns' sister:

"I hope there is nothing to the story. I never want to see Kearns go back."

DEMPSEY HEADS EAST

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26.—(UP.)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, left here yesterday for New York to aid in the settlement of his legal controversy with Jack Kearns. Incidentally while in the East he will "talk fight" with Promoter Tex Rickard.

"I am going to New York primarily in connection with the Kearns lawsuits," he said, "they have been hanging fire for a long time and I am anxious to get them settled. I can't say much about any future fights. When I'm in New York I'll see Rickard and something may come out of the meeting."

PHIL GOLDSTEIN AND SISTER, FLORENCE

The first thing Phil Goldstein, Hill boxer, did after he collected his first big purse, $750, for his return bout with his keen local rival, Tommy Crowley, in the Motor Square Garden arena Monday night, was to take his crippled "kid" sister, Florence, aged 5, downtown and buy her a new winter outfit, consisting of a heavy coat and hat. She also picked up a baby doll souvenir, which is seen in the picture above. Phil has two other sisters and two brothers, all younger than himself, and little Florence, the youngest, is the apple of his eye. Florence is handicapped in walking by a hip affliction for which doctors have been treating her since her baby days. Phil's ambition is to make enough money in the ring to have a successful operation performed on the limb to restore it to normal use. Meanwhile he contributes from his ring earnings to the support of a large family. As a result of the draw verdict in his second bout with Crowley, it is likely the pair will meet a third time soon, and then perhaps he'll take little Florence out for another afternoon of shopping and pleasure.

The Pitt Freshmen come to Saltsburg annually to provide the football classic of the season. Coach Marks' boys are determined to run the Panther Cubs up a tree, while Dr. Carlson's Freshmen, smarting under last week's defeat by the Tech Plebes, are out to retrieve their honor at Saltsburg.

HANSEN TO BOX SCOTT

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(INS.)—Knute Hansen, heavyweight contender, today was expected to sign for a bout with Phil Scott, English champion, in place of Paulino Uzcudun, to be held on the original Scott-Uzcudun date, November 4, in Madison Square Garden. Paulino is definitely out of the running with an injured back and will meet Tom Heeney at a later date.

HARVARD LOSES STAR FOR INDIANA GAME

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 26.—(INS.)—Ed Donaghey, who starred against Dartmouth with his kicking and tackling, today was regarded as definitely out of play for the Harvard game with Indiana Saturday. The team surgeon announced that a badly wrenched knee will keep Donaghey out of a uniform of some time.

BALTIMORE MANAGER REJECTS HUB BID

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Twice in the last two weeks Jack Dunn, veteran manager and owner of the Baltimore International baseball team, has declined the management of the Boston Nationals. He declared his intention to "stay on the job" in Baltimore.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Jack Dunn, most successful manager in the International League, has been offered the managerial berth of the Boston Braves.

This was learned yesterday from a source close to Judge Emil Fuchs, president and principal owner of the Boston club.

Dunn has been offered a flattering contract, one of the largest to be given a manager in the big leagues. It is also understood that he would be permitted to buy some stock in the Boston club if he would accept the berth.

It is said that Fuchs has not considered Tris Speaker as the successor to Dave Bancroft and at no time did he regard the American League star as the man to fill the shoes of Bancroft.

According to the information, Fuchs is waiting for Dunn to decide. If Jack doesn't Fuchs has another man in view for the position and this other person, whose name could not be learned, has already accepted the job. Fuchs is understood to have offered him the berth with the provision that if Dunn should take the job, the Boston club would not be obligated to him.

Dunn may take hold of the reins of the Braves, as it is believed he has outlived his usefulness in Baltimore. Many major league clubs have offered him a berth during the past few years, but he preferred to remain in the International League.

Novel Methods Used to Mark Goal Line

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.) A football field no longer is a simple gridiron in appearance. With the goal posts moved back 10 yards, Harvard has supplemented the conventional white lines across the field with a pattern of diagonal lines at each extremity to mark the end zones. Some southern colleges use a checker board effect to distinguish that territory as neutral ground. Yale has a double mark at the goal line with the designation "G". Princeton has a single line labeled "O" and meaning "no yards." Georgia Tech has bright red hassocks or cushions as beacons at the ends of the goal lines.

NEWARK SEEKS JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Paul Block, owner of the Newark club of the International League, has offered Walter Johnson, veteran Washington pitcher, a contract to manage and possibly pitch for that club next year, it became known today after a conference between the two men. Johnson has been given his unconditional release from the local American League club.

The exact terms of the offer were not divulged today, although it is understood to be for two years.

Johnson said today he was considering the offer along with about a dozen others from minor league clubs and several major league teams.

"I haven't decided just what I will do yet," he said, "but expect to make a decision shortly, probably within a few days."

HOPPE-REISELT TO PLAY UNOFFICIAL TITLE EVENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(INS.)—With the hopes of a victory that would strengthen his claim to the three-cushion billiard championship, Willie Hoppe, former balkline titleholder, today posted forfeit to meet Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, for the "unofficial championship." The match will start Monday afternoon.

Numbers 1 and 2 Passed Up by Passers

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Numbers 1 and 2 will not be worn by the well-dressed basketball player this winter, on the ground those numbers are harder for a referee to distinguish on a busy court than 4, 5, 6, etc., a note is inserted in the rules just announced for the coming season urging teams "not to use numbers 1 and 2 in numbering players." A common practice has been to give the team captain No. 1.

THE Commercial-Industrial League, making preparations for its second year of activity, promises to enjoy a banner year on the floor this winter.

The league includes the leading industrial quintets in operation hereabouts, which augurs well for a successful campaign on the floor this winter.

Included in the list of members are Carnegie Steel, Duquesne Light, Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, Reliance Life, Dravo Construction and several other industrial teams.

John J. Freund, Jr., organizer of the league, still has an opening for a first-class team. Teams seeking this franchise should call Freund at Lafayette 4297.

THE Pittsburgh and Lake Erie team, winner of the first-half championship in the Commercial-Industrial League last winter, will be back this season stronger than ever, according to Herman Strahl, one of the mainstays of the railroaders.

The railroaders have obtained several new stars to bolster their lineup and as a result many followers of the loop are picking them to win the pennant.

ONE change has been made in the personnel of the Pittsburgh Bankers' League, Potter, Title and Trust Company replacing the Union Savings Bank quintet.

Union Savings failed to win a contest during its two years' connection with the league and the officials decided to drop it for a stronger quintet.

As in past years all games will be staged on the Fifth Avenue High School floor with West Penn referees in charge.

ANOTHER strong amateur basketball circuit was organized last night at a meeting held in Spalding's on Wood street, eight clubs being admitted to the Central League.

Included in the roster of the league are the South Side Falcons, Penn Five of Sharpsburg, Leslie Club of Lawrenceville, Avalon Scholastics, Pittsburgh Silents, One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery, Schneider Club of the North Side and the Lancers.

Another league will be organized tonight at Springdale when the members of the Allegheny Valley League gather.

seems here to be nothing less than fatuous. That this is a rule in New York, is not true. In fact, criticism is more metropolitan than it is provincial.

MR. BUCK says he is a man who believes in saying what he thinks no matter who objects—but somehow I gathered the idea from his letter that he does not believe I should say things that he doesn't like. However, no one can quarrel with his sincerity and this writer will be the last to find fault with his criticism. It's the most interesting letter that has come in in weeks and weeks. Too many of the letters lacked the fire and straight-talk that Mr. Buck sent along.

ANOTHER correspondent, W. B. R., writes in to say that contrary to the notion here that the gridiron at the Pitt Stadium was not marked plainly enough, with special reference to the goal line, the goal line was marked in red to differentiate it from the white lines denoting the sections between goals. He adds that the goal line was further marked by a blue flag, on which was written in white "Goal." W. B. R. contends that Kuosman, Carnegie end, who thought he was over the goal line is a good scout, but that if he didn't see the goal line it was his fault and not the fault of the Pitt gridiron engineers. Well, maybe the marking was plain, but if some of the boys, in spite of the marking don't recognize the goal line, it might be a good idea to instill a mechanical contrivance, which this column will be glad to invent, which will help out considerably. The line will be flat until a player approaches it and just as he gets near it the line, by the mechanical contrivance, will turn at right angles to the ground and in electric lights at the same instant will be flashed: "You are now nearing a historic spot in Pittsburgh—the goal line at the Pitt Stadium."

IN THE dressing room before the Crowley-Goldstein bout the other night: At one side of the room sits Tommy Crowley and beside him is Bill Heckman. They are awaiting time to be called from the room to the ring. Both are silent and Mr. Heckman looks as if he were waiting outside a dentist's office. Crowley is as calm as a world champion. On the other side of the room atop a table is Phil Goldstein, who is laying out medicine, bandages, sponge and bucket with the deliberation of a surgeon getting ready for a major operation. The situation is a little interesting, for here sat two boys in silence, who are speaking acquaintances, yet looking as if neither, was aware the other was within 100 miles of the place. Very soon they go into the ring to slug each other with everything they have and everything they can borrow. Then after that sort of meeting they get back into this dressing room and congratulate each other on the good bout.

MY OWN urge to change the nature of things was squelched once by a heartless and erudite reporter, Mr. Lockwood. As was Mr. Lockwood's wont we were discussing the higher realm of things. "Yes," I sighed portentously, "I really should be doing something else." And Mr. Lockwood agreed heartily, saying: "Why not try plumbing."

DUNDEE-HUDKINS ODDS DROP TO EVEN MONEY

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Ten-to-seven odds that Joe Dundee would retain his welterweight title in his fight with Ace Hudkins of Nebraska here next Saturday, generally tumbled to even money today.

Hudkins went through a stiff workout at Jack Dempsey's Manhattan Gymnasium yesterday.

Coach Faces Alumni Fire

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 26.—The dissatisfaction of alumni and undergraduates of Ohio State over the poor showing of the football eleven which was defeated by Michigan last Saturday, 21 to 0, culminated in the resignation of A. W. Raymond, president of "Varsity O"—alumni organization, yesterday.

Raymond publicly resigned at a meeting of the alumni body, which held a closed session, and at which Dr. J. W. Wilce, Ohio State head coach, answered criticisms leveled at him for the poor showing of the team. Both the playing and the coaching came in for the verbal fire, it was said.

Raymond was a three-letterman on the Ohio State team in 1910-11-12, and named as All-America tackle.

According to some of those who attended the stormy session, Dr. Wilce blamed the team's poor showing on internal dissension and friction among the players. He denied published charges that the team was weak on fundamental football. He insisted that the tackling and blocking were not fundamentally weak.

SHADY SIDE SECONDS TO PLAY FORD CITY HIGH

The second team of Shady Side Academy will take a trip up to Ford City tomorrow to engage the Ford City High School in football warfare, according to none other than Manager Bill Meyers. It will mark the first game of the season for the Aspinwall school's second team, and the boys are eager for the fray.

PROIE RETURNS TO SOUTH HILLS

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Students are enthusiastic at South Hills High School over the prospective return of Dr. James Proie, who will give Coach C. G. Washabaugh assistance in tutoring the grid team of that school once more, starting tomorrow. Washabaugh found in him a valuable assistant coach last season, and, under the circumstances, welcomes his aid again. The team has not been going as well as had been anticipated.

It is said that the students have been anxious for his return all season, due to several unexpected reverses.

He will just have time to lend what help he can to Washabaugh in fitting the warriors for their battle with Perry High, which only has lost one game, on Warrington Park field Friday afternoon.

NOT SO GOOD

BRIDEPORT, Neb., Oct. 25.—(AP.)—A plan to do away with disputed football championships ruling from games is under way here by officials of the Nebraska high school conference.

It is proposed that six alternate plays be given to each team in a tied game after the expiration of the regular playing period. Team gaining most yardage in the six plays would be victor.

SOCCER

By TOM BIRKS

Just as the fans in the district figured that Heidelberg had braced and come back into its own, news of the Pittsburgh defeat was scattered around the district over the week-end, and now the fans are going back to the old feeling that this is not the Green and Gold year.

One thing that helped defeat Heidelberg on Saturday was Sandy Strachan, who played such a part in the success of the national champions last season.

Other fans feel that the scoring power of that front line is sadly on the wane. Last season the scoring of one goal against Balsarini's club did not mean a thing, and never during the season would the club lose a game when the opposition scored a lone point. However, Bill O'Donnell does not seem to be able to get the scoring end of the machine operating, and unless the team as a whole takes a decided brace dismissal from other tourneys will be felt.

With the taking of names at the Hamarville-Corinthians game the future of Sunday football in that neck of the woods seems very much in the air. It is too bad. Notwithstanding the troubles and trials of the industrial conditions in that little town, Manager Robinson tried hard to get together a good outfit that would find the natives with some recreation. However, someone took a hand, and did not help the game at all.

Sickles is playing a dominating part in the success of the Mustard Hollow club this season. The big halfback is carrying the brunt of the defensive part of the program with help from Hamilton and Miller, but on Sunday the center half placed the name of his club in the hat when he flashed that ball into the net from the penalty kick awarded.

There will be a special meeting of the West Penn Football Association at the Benedum Trees Building this evening. The draw for the cups will be made and from recent events it is very evident that plenty of other matters are to take up plenty of the officials' time.

It seems too bad that soccer football has to be in a state of turmoil all of the time. Every meeting of the association finds the secretary with a full list of troubles for the council to iron out.

At this session the draw for the second round of the senior and junior cups will be made. Despite the sensational results in the first round of the competition, plenty of well-balanced teams still remain in the race. Mustard Hollow, however, has gone and that is too bad. Most of the fans in the district would have rather seen the Elizabeth club stay in the tourney to the exclusion of the Rovers. The Sickles is a far more colorful aggregation and appeals more to the fans.

JOHNNIES, COLTS CLAIM STAR

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 26.—It now transpires that two clubs of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League are claiming Shortstop John (Shine) Cortazzo—Cumberland and Johnstown. They have him on their reserve rosters. The question as to which club will have the Wilmerding flash next season, however, is not one that causes any conjecture in Cumberland, where he started his professional baseball career and from which team he was banished in the 1927 season and sent to Johnstown.

The reservation of Cortazzo by Cumberland and Johnstown, however, is evidence the clubs are at cross currents over the deal which made Cortazzo a member of the Flood City contingent. Cortazzo was loaned to Chief Albert Bender to round out the Johnstown team in its rejuvenation. Merle Beam, secretary of that club, admitted here that Cortazzo was to be purchased by Johnstown at the close of the season. The question now arises what will Johnstown pay for Cortazzo since it is evident the Flood City team intends to hold him. November 5 is the deciding day in the deal for Cortazzo, while the same date will tell the tale of the pending purchase of five other Colt players.

NOTES of the BOXERS

TEX RICKARD is the owner of the new Olympia arena which will be dedicated in Detroit tonight with the battle between Tom Heeney and Johnny Risko as the feature event, and he has carried two carloads of New York and Chicago sports writers to the Michigan city as his guests.

An all-star card has been arranged for the Detroit show. Archie Bell and Johnny Vacca, crack bantams, meet in the semi-final; Joe Lucas boxes Benny Gershe and Clarence Rosen mingles with Steve Nugent. All of the bouts are 10-rounders. Benny Ray is matchmaker of the club.

Andy Tomosky, Wilmerding bantamweight, boxes Jimmy McDermott, of Terre Haute, Ind., at Gary, Ind., Friday night. Jack Kelly, former boxer of McKeesport and brother of Bernard Kelly, who manages Tomosky, will handle Andy in the bout. Jack now is married and makes his home in Gary. On Friday night of next week, Tomosky boxes Joe Crist, of Cleveland, at Akron.

Teddy Welch, McKeesport lightweight, is matched for three bouts. He boxes Harry Taylor at Johnstown tomorrow night; Young Rudy again at Johnstown, November 7, and Joe Lockhart at Cincinnati November 14.

Pal Moran, veteran lightweight of New Orleans, appears to have reached the end of his pugilistic string. He was knocked out in seven rounds by Frankie Schaefer at Chicago last night.

Tony Ross, Carnegie junior-welterweight, lost to Jackie Purvis, of Kokomo, Ind., in a 10-round bout at Indianapolis last night. Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, drew with an old rival, Jackie Britton in 10 rounds, back in his old home town, Wilkes-Barre.

Davey Adelman, former Philadelphia flyweight, is now boxing as a bantam and making his headquarters in Chicago.

Yale End Wins Wager From Army Star

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—When the Army and Navy football teams play their annual game at the Polo Grounds, November 26, "Stew" Scott, Yale's brilliant left end, will be occupying one of two choice seats with a companion—at the expense of Capt. Harry Wilson, of the Army eleven.

Last Saturday, while Army played Yale, Scott tapped Wilson on the shoulder.

"Two Army-Navy tickets you don't make a yard around my end the next time you try," said the Yale man.

"It's a bet," countered the Army leader.

On the very next play Wilson shot out to his right and the Yale flankman jolted him with a sharp tackle for a one-yard loss.

"And don't forget those tickets," said Scott, as he started back into position.

"You'll get them," was the reply.

Tech Needs Win Badly

By JESS CARVER

CARNEGIE TECH'S varsity football team finds itself in a precarious position as it prepares for the battle with West Virginia at Morgantown Saturday.

The Tartans have so far failed to get anywhere in the gridiron race. Both W. & J. and Pitt, ancient, honorable and important rivals of the Plaid, had scored victories at the Plaid's expense. This, my friends, has not been done during the past few years with any degree of regularity, at least, both of the rivals haven't been able to manhandle the Tartans in the same season. The two defeats of the past week-ends have stung Tech to the quick, and as they drill for the game this Saturday, they find themselves dedicated to the task of "making or breaking."

The West Virginia game, despite the fact that the Mountaineers are also enjoying a lean year, will not be any easy game for either team. West Virginia showed unexpected power in tying Lafayette and Washington and Lee. True, Rodgers' men gave a horrible example of how football should not be played in the Pitt fiasco, and they couldn't have looked so very good last Saturday while the crippled Georgetown eleven was thumping 'em. But there is a lot of power encased in the bulk of the Mountaineer squad. It remains for Rodgers to bring it out.

Tech can still get some glory out of the season by getting a draw or two and maybe a victory out of the remaining four major games on the schedule, with West Virginia, New York, Oregon and Detroit. If they can tie Detroit, hold New York and Oregon to low scores, and beat West Virginia, their season will not be looked back on as a total loss, for they downed Thiel, Westminster and Drexel in their preliminary games.

Of course, the task is going to be a hard one, for West Virginia, in the same boat, will be fighting tooth and nail, cleat and knuckler, to beat Tech. Reports from Morgantown indicate that Rodgers has his club in good physical trim, and if he can effect the same successful reorganization of his forces for this game that he did for the Lafayette encounter, maybe he can take Steffen and Waddell and their merry Scots into camp.

DUKES GOING WELL

It has been so long since Duquesne has seen a high rating in the Tri-State Conference ahead of them that the sight of a possible second place for this season seems to the Durable Dukes to be a mistake.

Duquesne, by defeating Westminster Saturday, will have a fine chance to sew up the runner-up position for themselves. If, by any chance, Tommy Holleran or Furman Nuss should pilot their Thiel or Bethany elevens to a surprise win over Geneva, the Dukes might find themselves in a tie with Col. McMillin's Covenanters when the season ends.

In meeting Westminster this week, Layden will send his team against an opponent with three outstanding stars. A good punter, a good quarterback and a peach of an end are to be found on the Westminster team. McQuistion is just as good a kicker as is to be found in the district. Machin, the doughty little end, has been playing a splendid game all season and Hall, the quarterback, rivals Berkman of Thiel. They have a good plunging back in O'Donovan, a brother of the famous Roy, of Duquesne.

HOLD PITT AIM

Allegheny is prepping for the Pitt game, to be played in the stadium Saturday, with the idea in mind of holding the Panthers to the lowest score possible. So far, the Methodists have failed to win a game, have been tied by Westminster and beaten by Grove City, St. Bonaventure and Dartmouth.

Pitt will give most of the regulars a rest and will use second string men for the most part.

WILKES-BARRE PROS FINED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—Officials of the Eastern League, a professional football organization, have forfeited the franchise of the Wilkes-Barre club and fined its management $500 for failure to send its regular team to Atlantic City for a league game last Sunday.

Wilkes-Barre, with Harry Stuhldreher and Ed Huntsinger of Notre Dame among the stars in its lineup, was booked to play at Atlantic City, and Manager E. C. Willets of Atlantic City advertised these stars extensively.

On Sunday Wilkes-Barre was alleged to have sent its stellar combination to Stapleton, S. I., while a second team traveled to Atlantic City.

Manager Willets, without knowledge of this change until game time, offered to refund the fans' money.

League officials held up the guarantee offered to Wilkes-Barre and declared this forfeited, as well as the $500 posted for the league franchise.

world series cut, which amounted to about $4,000 additional.

The passing of Groh to the minors will be the first cut in the Pittsburgh roster, which, with Groh included, totals the legal limit of 40 players. But the cutting will not stop at the dropping of Groh. He will have plenty of company later in leaving the Buccaneer fold, for there is a big job of housecleaning to be done, and seven or eight other players besides Groh will be missing when the time for the 1928 start toward the Paso Robles training camp rolls around.

THEY used to speak of the Texas League in terms of derision and to refer to it as the other extreme of baseball in comparison with the majors.

Even the little pop fly hits that drop safely between the infield and outfield came to be termed "Texas Leaguers" all over the country.

But now there is a different Texas League in existence. It has grown and progressed until it is one of the strongest minor leagues in the country. Its strength was shown again only recently, when Wichita Falls, the Texas League pennant winner, won the Dixie series against New Orleans, the Southern Association champion, in four straight games.

The league has some great cities and some fine ball parks in its circuit, and is destined to be even better next year.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Wilkes-Barre, Pa. — Johnny Dunn (of New Kensington), and Jackie Britton drew, 10 rounds; Freddie Haverlock knocked out Johnny Regan, 3 rounds.

At New York—Herman Silverberg defeated Benny Nabors, 10 rounds; Jimmy Doyle knocked out Mickey Pastore, 2 rounds.

At San Francisco—Sergt. Sammy Baker won by technical knockout over Jimmy Duffy, 5 rounds; Speedy Dado defeated Benny Marks, 10 rounds.

At Chicago—Mike Dundee won by technical knockout over Armando Santiago, 2 rounds; Frankie Schaefer knocked out Pal Moran, 2 rounds.

At Indianapolis—Red Chinn defeated Charley Nashert, 10 rounds; Jackie Purvis defeated Tony Ross, 8 rounds.

At St. Petersburg, Fla.—Jimmy Russell defeated Willie Greenspan, 10 rounds.

At Portland, Ore.—Charley Belanger defeated K. O. Brown 10 rounds.

Judge Landis as the supreme ruler of baseball.

With McDiarmid elected to and accepting the presidency, James P. Orr, Red director and prominent Cincinnati shoe merchant, was appointed to fill the vacancy of secretary, vacated by McDiarmid. This post will be temporary as it now stands, but Orr may be officially and finally elected to it at the meeting of the board of directors, which will be held in November.

Herrmann held the chairmanship of the commission until the election of Judge Landis as single high commissioner in the winter of 1920. During his long term of office perhaps the greatest achievement of the Red chief was the planning and promoting of the world series.

The first world series under Herrmann's auspices was played between the New York Giants and the Philadelphia Athletics in 1905, and it has been played every year since that date, with constantly increasing enthusiasm and with very few changes in the rules as originally devised and promulgated by Mr. Herrmann.

It is likely that he will take an extended tour, possibly by boat through the Panama Canal to San Francisco, during which trip he could call on his many friends in the various lodges of Elks, of which he is past grand exalted ruler. Herrmann celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday on the fifth day of last May.

GARRY NO HERO HERE

Few tears were shed by Pittsburgh baseball fans today when it was announced that Garry Herrmann had retired as president of the Cincinnati Reds. To the contrary, a few old-timers voiced regret that he had not quit baseball prior to 1912, at which time he deprived the Pirates of the services of George Sisler by handing down a decision in favor of St. Louis to end the Pirates-Browns fight for the phenomenal first baseman.

The 1912 decision which so pained Barney Dreyfuss and Pirate fans was made by Herrmann when he was chairman of the national commission.

COX BACK IN ELI DRILLS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 26.—(UP.)—Yale coaches ordered strenuous drills for today and tomorrow in preparation for the Dartmouth game Saturday. Halfback Cox has returned to the varsity lineup and probably will be Bruce Caldwell's running mate.

JACK IN TROUBLE

COLUMBIA CITY, Ind., Oct. 26.—Jack Johnson, ex-heavyweight champion of the world will be tried here next Friday before Circuit Court Judge A. F. Biggs, on a charge of violating the state prohibition law.

The big Negro, arrested last week, left his high-priced coupe as surety for his return for hearing.

After Shaving

Skin tingling with life. Skin cool as a cucumber after shaving instead of burning hot. Skin that is smooth instead of raw.

That's the way your skin feels when you use Listerine after shaving. Just douse it on full strength. If you don't think it improves a shave 50% you're the exception.

Listerine first stimulates the skin, then soothes it. The antiseptic essential oils contained in it quickly heal tiny cuts and scratches left by the razor, and at the same time lessen the danger of infection.

By the way, have you written for our free book of etiquette? It covers points men are always uncertain about. Address Lambert Pharmacal Company, Dept. K-9, 2101 Locust Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Bankers' New President Rural District Product

By B. C. FORBES

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 26.

ONE day a mother, with a blue-eyed 3-year-old boy, walked into a St. Louis bank, approached the president, whose desk was in the open, and asked for a loan to take her to Chicago.

"Have you any collateral?" he asked.

"No," she replied timidly.

"Oh, yes, you have, the best collateral in the world, this beautiful little boy," he assured her.

She seized her child, pressed him to her bosom in alarm, and exclaimed:

"I couldn't, I wouldn't leave him."

She got her loan—and the blue-eyed collateral walked smilingly out of the bank.

THAT banker has just been chosen as the man best fitted to become head of America's association of 21,000 bankers now meeting here in annual convention.

"I'd rather put soul into the dollar than make soulless dollars," confessed this man to me. He is John G. Lonsdale, president of the hundred-million-dollar National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis. Usually brainy men go to New York to earn a fortune and then end their days in that hectic atmosphere. Lonsdale, after making his fortune in the metropolis, returned to his native territory "so that I could become a companion to my children, lead a rational life and maybe be of some little service to the part of the country I came from."

JOHNNIE LONSDALE was orphaned when six because his father, according to the monument raised to him by citizens of Memphis, after his work during the yellow plague epidemic, "sacrificed his life in noble sacrifice for a sacred duty."

When living with an uncle at Hot Springs, Ark., the lad used to ride a scraggy pony all over the mountains and trails and pick out the best track for building a railroad when he became a man. Sure enough, a capitalist came along who wanted to build a line. Johnnie showed him the most economical route, was put to work, and when it was placed in charge to operate it. He made a go of it. It was bought by the Missouri Pacific and Lonsdale was made a director, a position he still holds.

That boyhood dream having come true, Lonsdale made another come true; he went to New York, became a partner of Logan & Bryan, the far-flung stock exchange firm, earned a fortune, and then, for reasons already explained, accepted an urgent invitation to return to St. Louis as a bank president in 1915. The bank is now twice the size it then was.

And thus the American Bankers' Association has again reached out for a rural lad of humble beginnings to become its head—following the promotion of Tom Preston and Craig Hazlewood. It is a story worth telling, is it not?

THE feature of yesterday's session was President Traylor's farewell address. Mel Traylor is another product of the backwoods; he never rode on a train until grown to manhood. Here are sentences from this big Chicago banker's speech:

"We sometimes wonder if we have not been too ready to accept benefits without making a corresponding contribution in the interest of others."

"Nothing would be more unfortunate than that anything should be done to change the fundamental structure of the Federal Reserve act."

"Is it too much to insist that the financial policies of this country be made and carried out by those who have practical experience as well as theoretical training in matters of finance and banking?"

"We must make foreign loans and investments both for the preservation of our own economic position and in justice and fairness to the rest of the world."

"When and if there is at some future time a further consideration and adjustment of Germany's reparation payments, then conscience and good faith will undoubtedly dictate a further review of the subject of the international debt from our standpoint."

"I believe—barring unthinkable stupidity on the part of all of us—our political and economic future is reasonably secure."

"This is my hope for the future: That we may be rich without forgetting to be righteous; that we may have leisure without license; that we may be powerful without being offensively proud; that we may be nationally-minded without being narrow-minded, and finally that we may live in a world of fact without surrendering our faith."

DANIEL WILLARD, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, said the other day that the railroads simply wanted to be left alone for a while to work out their own salvation. That is exactly what our bankers want.

May I add that, to earn this boon, it is high time our responsible bankers and bank associations put their foot down as far as is in their power upon the questionable "investment trusts" that are springing up like mushrooms? If they don't, look out for disturbance by and by.

STOCKS TUMBLE FROM EARLY PEAKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—A strong upward movement in the stock market in the early trading today instigated by record-breaking third quarter earnings of the General Motors Corporation and renewed investment and speculative buying, petered out for a time in the early afternoon. The temptation to take profits on gains of 1 to 3 points supplemented by bear selling of U. S. Steel, Green Cananea Copper and Houston Oil caused prices to slide down rapidly from their earlier peaks.

General Motors, which started the day at 133½, fell to 130¼, fractionally under yesterday's final quotation. U. S. Steel, which closed yesterday at 139⅝, dipped to 136⅝, as more consideration was given to the drop of nearly $5,000,000 in third quarter earnings of the corporation. Dupont receded to 218 after getting as high as 225¾ and International Harvester dropped 5 points from its best figure. Greene Cananea Copper had a loss of 6½ as the reputed pool in the issue backed away from offerings, and in many other instances large gains were whittled down materially.

Although a number of extra dividends by minor companies attracted attention and aside from the General Motors statement, news developments had a bearish tinge. September railroad earnings continued to show a backward disposition and freight loadings, while exceeding those of the preceding week, still fell far behind last year's figures. Shrinking crude oil production was largely offset by reports of lower earnings by some petroleum companies. The money situation was little changed.

Notwithstanding the extent of the setback in particular shares, however, there were few points of actual weakness. There was quite a sprinkling of soft spots in steel, copper, public utilities, chemical and railroad equipment groups.

Local Market Quiet, Prices Steady

There were no noticeable changes in quotations on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the first half of the session today, prices holding firmly near the levels prevailing on the close Tuesday. Lone Star Gas got a late start, but before the close of the market registered a new high record. Arkansas was dull and practically unchanged.

Standard Sanitary held the previous day's gains satisfactorily and while there was a little realizing as a result of the Tuesday bulge, the demand was of sufficient proportion to prevent anything beyond a fractional recession. Miscellaneous manufacturing issues were dull and practically unchanged. American Window Glass Machine's report showing a substantial falling off in earnings had no visible effect on the company's shares, which were quoted near recent figures. It was assumed that the declines in both issues over the past few weeks had discounted the statement issued yesterday.

The early firmness in Standard Sanitary was followed by a definite upward movement later in the day, the advance in the stock being accomplished on a relatively light volume which was taken to indicate that holders were still confident of higher prices. No news accompanied the rise, but demand was firm all day and the forward movement showed no signs of meeting enough stock to halt the advance.

Foreign Exchange.

The Foreign Exchange Market Wednesday was quite active with all rates easy. There was no special feature today. Quotations follow:

NEW ISSUE

In the Opinion of Counsel, this Issue is Legal for the Investment of Trust Funds under the Laws of the State of New York

$3,000,000
The Barbizon
S. E. Cor. Lexington Ave. and 63rd St., New York

Recently Completed Building Now in Operation

Borrowing Corporation Headed by WILLIAM H. SILK
One of Originators and for Over 14 Years Active Operating Head of Allerton Houses

First Mortgage 6% Serial Gold Loan

$500 and $1,000 Denominations. Due Serially 1929-1939. Interest payable April 15 and October 15

2% Federal Normal Income Tax. Any State Taxes up to Six Mills of Principal Amount, and Massachusetts 6% State Income Tax Refunded by Borrower

Chase National Bank, New York, Trustee

Security comprises a Closed First Mortgage on 13,250 square feet of land owned in fee, recently-completed 22-story building of fireproof construction, equipment and earnings, together with furnishings of hotel and public rooms. The building contains eight stores and 710 rentable rooms.

The location of the property is considered one of the most desirable in New York City for a building designed for and devoted to the use of women. In the immediate vicinity are located some of the city's most prominent hotels and public buildings.

Independent appraisals of the land and completed building by recognized authorities show a total valuation of over 150% of the loan, which makes these securities legal for the investment of trust funds under the laws of the State of New York; additional security is afforded by the furnishings of the building, the estimated cost of which is placed at $275,000.

Expert independent estimate of net annual earnings is over 2.31 times maximum yearly interest charges on entire loan, which will be reduced by semi-annual serial payments of principal. In addition to all of the stores being leased, reservations for over 600 guest rooms were received prior to completion.

The borrowing corporation is headed by William H. Silk, who for over 14 years was active operating head of the Allerton Companies and is still a large stockholder.

Provision is made for quarterly deposits in advance with the Chase National Bank, New York, Trustee, to meet interest and principal payments promptly. Mortgage Title Guarantee Policy for $3,000,000, issued by the New York Title and Mortgage Co.

Based Upon a Record of Leadership in Safety to Investors for 72 Years, these Securities of the Highest Standard are Approved and Recommended by the Oldest Real Estate Bond House

I JUST KNOW I'M GOING TO HAVE TROUBLE WITH THAT WOMAN NEXTDOOR ABOUT HER TURN TO HAVE THE HALL SCRUBBED. TWICE I'VE GIVEN HER DIGS BUT SHE MERELY SIMPERS AND CHANGES THE SUBJECT.
OH WELL THAT'S A SMALL MATTER!
IT ISN'T WITH ME! I SHOULD WORK MYSELF TO A SHADOW SO THAT WOMAN CAN SPEND SIX DAYS A WEEK RUNNING, LIKE THE FIRE DEPARTMENT, TO SOCIAL AFFAIRS!
I'LL SPEAK TO HERMAN ABOUT IT. HE'S A REAL MAN AND.....
NO, I CAN HANDLE THIS MATTER MYSELF! I DON'T NEED ANY HELP TO LET HER KNOW THAT SHE CAN'T WALK ALL OVER JOSEPHINE BUNGLE.
I'VE ALWAYS FOUND HIM EXTRA REASONABLE. HE KNOWS HIS PLACE.
OH, I'LL ADMIT THEY'RE THE BEST NEIGHBORS WE EVER HAD BUT IT WOULDN'T TAKE LONG TO SPOIL HER IF SHE GOT THE IDEA THAT I WAS AFRAID TO STAND UP FOR MY RIGHTS.

BUGS BAER Says

THERE is a chance of Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, being right in his battle with Alphabetical spelling blocks.

He threatens to throw all of Chicago's books into Lake Michigan to educate the fish.

What we would like to know is how Thompson discovered that Chicago had a library.

If Thompson is correct it proves there is a first time for everything. But we agree with him when he objects to the painting showing George Washington standing up in a rowboat.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

George had too good a reputation for sobriety and generalship to spoil it by perpetrating the vacation habit of standing up in a rowboat.

We also agree with Thompson's loud bassoon against the school books which state the Liberty Bell was discovered by King Edward the Seventh when he visited America while still Prince of Wales.

We were taught that the Liberty Bell was discovered by George the Third.

Of course Rudyard Kipling is an author who pans the ears off of America apparently without reason.

But there is a reason for Kip's peevish kippering. He married an American girl.

George Bernard Shaw hasn't got this excuse.

We wish that Thompson would stop harping about the glorious days of the revolution.

He's reminding Congress that there was a war in 1776.

And the first thing you know they will tax us on that one also.

ON "MISTAKING THE SIGNS"

Many PRETTY girls
EXPECT to be treated
Like ANTIQUES. Or, rather,
Like GREAT objects
Of ART.
They expect EVERY man
To be able to read
The notice in their EYES—
"LOOK, but DON'T touch!"
Of course, a MAN who Looks into the EYES
Of a PRETTY sophisticated
GIRL is liable
To see ANYTHING. And
Often he mistakes the notice
To KEEP OFF for
A sign to COME ON.
Then, of course, there is
An ARGUMENT in which
The man PROBABLY gets Called something pretty
LOW, because he did
NOT estimate the lady
Sufficiently HIGH.
But then, no man can Ever KNOW the REAL worth
Of a TRUE woman,
And it is HARD to get
A CORRECT estimate on
One who is "NOT SO GOOD."
STILL—men WILL get
SLAPPED till they do.

Policemen Should Ignore Orders to Electioneer

We wonder if Mayor Kline read a news story about one of his police heads addressing an assemblage of patrolmen and advising them to go out and canvass voters in behalf of certain candidates whom he named, Astute gentleman of affairs, wise to what's what, the Mayor must realize that a policeman's word to some voters will be tantamount to an order,

Some small tradesmen and other persons know they can be annoyed, even persecuted and made miserable, if they do not "stand in" with "their" policeman. Will the Mayor think about that in reflecting on the significance of the order of the officer who told his men what was expected of them politically?

As for the policemen, they will show an admirable spirit of independence and manhood if they pay no attention to directions given them to seek votes in behalf of any candidate. With intelligent persons they would be only making themselves ridiculous, anyway.

Theoretically a policeman has as much right as any person to work for a candidate, always presuming he would do it on "his own time" and not while on duty. Actually, propriety and the dignity of his office should cause him to refrain from electioneering.

We hope and believe Mayor Kline will countermand that order—for the credit of his administration and the integrity of the police force.

Elevation of Mr. Farrell Fortunate for Pittsburgh

The selection of James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, to succeed the late Judge Gary as executive chairman of that great industrial organization, is a wise one, if one may judge a man's capacity by his record of success. Mr. Farrell's career has been successful beyond any measure short of that implied by "astounding."

From the time he began work as a boy in a wire mill in his native city, New Haven, to his selection for the new position, his life not only has been one of great accomplishments but of preparation for even greater achievement. His early successes came in Pittsburgh, where he began as a laborer, advanced to foremanship, salesman, sales manager, general manager and organizer and head of a corporation with which he as well as his plant was merged with United States Steel.

That is a romance that has been developed along unromantic lines. It would be foolish to attempt to point a moral by stating that what Mr. Farrell has done any man can do. It would be foolish because only a man of great energy, capacity and will could achieve such a goal. Yet, it is pertinent to state that opportunities to do as Mr. Farrell has done still exist. Opportunities to even surpass his record are among the things that will exist.

Former Pittsburgh associates of Mr. Farrell will felicitate him on having been settled on for the executive chairmanship of United States Steel. We have it on no less authority than that of B. C. Forbes, noted business commentator, that Pittsburgh can felicitate itself because a man of Mr. Farrell's attainments is to become more of a power in the steel business.

The Healthiest Month

Do You Know Why You Feel So Well in October?

This is the HEALTHY MONTH.

It is the month of energy, mental alertness, because the Summer's tiring heat is gone, the fine Autumn weather has come, AND YOU HAVE OXYGEN IN YOUR BLOOD.

You feel particularly well in October, because since early in May your system has been getting the fresh air that it needs. You will not feel so well in November, you will feel less well in December. In February and March many will be feeling tired, blue and think they need a vacation.

As a matter of fact, in February and in March, many will be starving for FRESH AIR, which the great majority of us do not get during the Winter months.

Barrett Andrews is a wise man, though very young. It was he who said, "Tell the people WHY they feel so well in October. Tell them to get fresh air in Winter as they do in Summer, and you will be a public benefactor.

Three great things in this world are absolutely free, and the majority of human beings never have enough of them:

FRESH AIR.
SUNSHINE.
SLEEP.

Get the sleep, and get it with your WINDOWS OPEN. Many of you are prevented by civilization and the nature of your work from getting the sunshine, except on Sunday. But get it when you can.

Get the sleep and the fresh air EVERY DAY. You are taxed for your water, your bread, your sugar, your meat, your coal—but you can open the window without any charge and get the fresh air. GET IT.

See that your children get it, and advise others to get it.

If your car is stuffy, as it usually is, do not sit calmly breathing in carbon dioxide, the poison that we all manufacture and breathe out. Tell the conductor to open the window and let in some air.

Open your own window at night. Do not imagine that you can possibly get TOO MUCH air.

Learn from your children, or better still by a personal visit, the condition of the schoolroom. If the air is bad complain to the teacher, to the superintendent, to the Mayor of the city.

Make yourself a NUISANCE, if necesary.

It is better for you to be a nuisance to some public official than for your child to be anaemic, half developed.

What a queer nation it is! Every man knows enough to give fresh air to the gold fish—they wouldn't live if they didn't get it. And not one in ten realizes the importance of giving fresh air to the children.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Verdun and Peace

I WAS present at Verdun in September during the reunion there of the American Legion and the French army, in the presence of the great "ossuaire" that towers on Douaumont heights, guarding the bones of 400,000 soldiers, fallen in that mighty battle that raged during long-drawn-out months on these wonderful fortified hills, and that finally proclaimed that France was not to be destroyed. Ten years ago they fought that marvelous fight, but still, after so long an interval, and notwithstanding the increasing cultivation of the blood-drenched land, many square miles of the surrounding territory are thickly pitted with those terrible "shell-craters," the sight of which turns the thought of human beings fighting into a horror.

No one can look upon the dreadful scars that the earth bears around Verdun without revulsion of feeling capable of causing even the most confirmed "militarist" to hate and to despise war. The vast soldiers' cemeteries with their endless ranks of white crosses seem to be calling to a mad world to have pity upon its innocent children.

And the mad world shakes its gory locks, and staring at the dreadful spectacle produced by its insanity, seems forced to listen. For, just at this moment we read every day of the effects of the strong current of anti-war sentiment which is turning the minds of the nations toward a combined effort to abolish and to outlaw war. It is the drawing of only a peace by promise, yet even a barbarian could hardly refuse to wish it success.

But even those who mingle belief with hope in this matter must cultivate precaution as well. They must remember that there is no sounder law known to psychology than that opportunity breeds temptation.

The same principle of mental inertia which makes revolutions terrible while it renders reform easy by evolutionary methods, applies to these attempts of the peoples just recovering from the tremendous shock of the World War to establish peace by legislation. If war is made an outlaw in human society, how are the peaceful to be protected against the outlaw? Unless human nature is miraculously changed the protection can only be obtained by arms.

That means preparation, military training, vigilance, loyalty, unshaken patriotism, sacrifice, belief in high ideals of human capacity. It will never be attained by Bolshevistic methods. The abolition of war is an ideal, like those taught to his half-comprehending followers by the Founder of Christianity—something to be always aimed at, always kept in view, but only reachable in part, and through long-continued, even age-long efforts. A Verdun helps by opening the mental eye and awaking the dulled conscience of men.

But, let those who quail before the horrible aspect of war reflect that all the blame for the existence and activity of this fearful demon is not justly to be heaped upon the shoulders of "militarism." The soldier, the general, is a means of protection and defense no less than an instrument and agent of aggression. The whole story of the World War is not to be read in the military archives or the narratives of awful battles; you must go back of all that and see what part the growth and spread of commercial and industrial ambition and rivalry had in forcing on the catastrophe and prolonging its results.

And, when you really understand the whole story, the memory of Verdun may make you shudder yet again while thinking of those men dying by the hundred thousand in that hellish battle. Verdun indicts human nature!

The Budget System

HOW is that budget plan of yours coming along?

Has it so often overstepped its limitations that you think there is little use of continuing it?

Do you find it comfortable and easy to draw from the different funds to enable yourself to buy articles you could get along without?

Do you "rob Peter to pay Paul" till your budget system is practically worthless?

Even if you have had to draw upon certain funds would it not be worthwhile to control your expenses so that others may remain intact?

If you controlled your expenses, this budget idea would enable you to save more money than you have in the past.

Any plan that improves your condition is worth a thorough trial.

The first year is the hardest to keep within bounds.

But if it starts you on the road to saving and accumulation it is worth a lot to you.

Be ashamed to give it up until you have mastered it.

Courage

NOT always can we hope to find bright days with brisk and favoring wind for all our ships that sail; the winds and waves have little care for all the freight of hopes they bear, and death rides many a gale. Not always are the ways we go bright paths where pink and daisy grow with roses gay and sweet; sometimes we pass down roads of fear with dark morass and jungle near and chasms at our feet. But always, whether dark or bright the way with terror or delight, of this we may be sure: with courage it is ours to tread the road of rapture or of dread and greatly to endure.

Tales That Are Told

Grace Before Payment

A DUCHESS had been owing a bill to her milliner for a long time. The milliner finally sent her little daughter to collect it.

"Be sure to say 'Your Grace' to the duchess," said the anxious mother.

When, after long waiting, she was ushered into the presence of the duchess, the little girl made a low curtsey, and then, folding her hands and closing her eyes, said, softly:—

"For what I am about to receive may I be truly thankful."

His Feelings Spared

HE WAS an old soldier who had been run over by a motor car. His accident made an operation imperative, and on coming to from the ether the patient noticed that although it was still daylight all the blinds were drawn.

He called the nurse and asked the reason.

"Feel all right?" she asked.

"Right as rain," replied the other. "But why are the blinds drawn?"

"Well," replied the nurse, "there's been a big fire across the road, and we thought that if you awoke too soon you might think the operation had been unsuccessful."

The Substitute

A BEAUTIFUL actress became the possessor of an expensive pearl necklace. To mislead any house-breaker who might be inclined to carry her property away she made it a practice to leave the necklace lying carelessly upon her dressing-table beside a sheet of paper on which she had written:—

"These are imitation pearls. I keep my real pearls in a safety vault."

One night when she arrived home she discovered that her pearls were gone, and, in place of the note she had left beside them, she found this:—

"I'm just a substitute. The burglar who is regularly assigned to this district is in prison."

Under Orders

A COUNTRY parson was going his nightly round to see that all was locked up safely, when he heard someone prowling around his barnyard.

He went cautiously forward and soon discovered that it was his gardener, who had been absent some time with rheumatism.

"What are you doing here at this time of night?" he asked. "This cold, damp air can't be good for your rheumatism."

"Doctor's orders, sir," said the prowler.

"What's that? Did he tell you to grope around at night?"

"Well, no, sir, not exactly; but he ordered me chicken broth."—London Tit-Bits.

The Grand Feeling

THE major of a crack regiment had died and there was an impressive military funeral, with crowds along the way. A woman standing near the church said to another after the cortege had passed: "Was the dead gentleman anything to ye ma'am?"

"No," replied the woman addressed.

"Ye looked so sorry, I was sure he was something to ye," continued the first.

"He was a human being and a brave soldier; that should be something to all of us."

"Yis, yis, to be sure. I do be feelin' that way meself this mornin'. But wouldn't it be grand, ma'am, mournin' for a man like that, supposin' he was somethin' to ye?"—The Belfast News-Letter.

New York Day by Day
by
O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Blase New York sometimes turns its head for a fleeting gaze at madly rushing fire wagons, but that is about all. An ordinary fire does not stir the interest of a dog fight on Main street. Buildings often burn around the corner and New Yorkers will not know it until they pass the ruins.

It takes a huge conflagration to have a block roped off. Modern apparatus and fireproofing have extracted thrills from fires. An apartment in a big residential building takes fire and about the worst it can do is to burn itself out. Next door tenants often do not even move out.

The romance once surrounding the firemen is now rather faint. The group of wide-eyed youngsters no longer surround him as he tilts back his chair and reads his newspaper in the doorway of the engine house. The youngsters are now gaping at the pavement pictures of movie idols.

New York has not had one of those sensational fires with screaming women leaping out the windows and firemen carrying unconscious victims over dizzy roof tops for several years. The fire has become standardized and holocaust has become obsolete along Park Row.

Despite this, however, New York has a few left who thrill to a fire. They are remnants of what were once known as "buffs." The "buff" was such a lover of conflagrations he often slept in fire engine stations in buffalo robes—hence the name "buff."

The "buff" was as enthusiastic over attending a fire as an ardent ball fan is over the world's series. It was a distinction to arrive on the gallop with the firemen and the more fires the better they liked it. One "buff" has a record of attending nearly 6,000 fires in 25 years.

The old-time "buff" is no longer a "buff." He is an honorary chief, so honored by the department. One prosperous banker and a famous surgeon have kept up their interest. Their homes and offices are fitted up with fire alarm telegraph instruments. They attend fires in regulation uniform.

* * *

The "We Boys" are reported to be up to old tricks. They once operated in the Peacock Alley of a famous hotel until hand-picked detectives pointed out the exits. Their mean racket is to pose as newspapermen and collect funds for the burial or hospital expenses of some imaginary brother. They also select men of wealth snagged on some high scandal and indicate they can temper the winds in the newspaper shops. And that is something that cannot be done on any paper worth while.

* * *

New York's Tenderloin, like its Rialto, has moved steadily northward. It was once between Twenty-eighth and Forty-second street. Now it ranges between Forty-second street and Columbus Circle. The title was bestowed by a police captain who, being transferred from Oak street to Herald Square, remarked to his cronies: "I'm going where I can get a bit of tenderloin instead of being compelled to dine on chuck steaks."

* * *

Park Row was once the paradise of the panhandler. But he, too, has mooched his way northward and today Columbus Circle and environs is the stamping ground of the bum. And about as insolent as you will find east of Chicago.

* * *

New York is said to have fewer women panhandlers, according to population, than any other city. The most famous of the female beggars is Crying Mary, who has control of her tear ducts and can weep at will. It is said her profits have been great enough to buy several apartment houses in nearby Jersey towns. But they always say every prosperous beggar owns apartment houses.

* * *

There are, incidentally, 225 women "longshoremen" and stevedores around various New York docks. They are Amazonian women who ask no odds of their husky male workers. There are also about 300 women chauffeurs and a hundred teamsters. And the Bronx has a lady machinist.

* * *

That's all I know about women who work in New York. Tomorrow I'm going to discuss society gentlemen. Bring the kiddies.

The Other Side

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Every once in a while you hear of a man who has been lucky, but you hardly ever hear of the thousands more that have been unlucky.

A man made several hundred thousands the other day gambling at Deauville. He put up a $4,000 chip, and while he stepped to the telephone for six or seven minutes his chip had increased in value until it was over $300,000. Some luck!

But the press account didn't tell you of probably the hundred other people that put up $4,000 chips and lost them all.

You heard of the man breaking the bank at Monte Carlo, but there is no special notice about the hundreds of suckers that lost there.

So when a man has a real estate proposition to make to you he tells you about other people that have made immense fortunes by buying land at a certain place and having it increase in value, but he doesn't tell you about other people who bought land and had it go flooey.

It is very interesting to have a promoter talk to you about making 100 per cent on your money within a few days.

The only way to be immune from this kind of lure is to make up your mind that you don't want 100 per cent.

The bait which these get-rich-quick Wallingfords use is the desire that most people have to get something for nothing. If you are satisfied with small and reasonable profits on your capital you are not going to be tempted into fool investments.

It is all right to want to get rich quick—everybody may want this—but the high yield on most investments is accompanied with high risk. If you want to keep your capital and not go to the poor house, don't look for high rates of profit.

People should understand the fundamental law of money, that is, that great profits always mean insecurity. When you are buying a bond that yields you 8 per cent, the chances are even that you will not get your capital back. When you buy a municipal bond that yields 4½ per cent, you know that you will not only get the per cent promised, but you will also receive your capital when it is due.

To be sure, Mr. Ford made astounding profits on his small investment, and General Motors and United States Steel have climbed high, also you could have bought American Telephone and Telegraph stock at a song some years ago and it is now worth $180. That is all true, but that is no reason for risking your small savings.

The only man who can afford to go into a venture with big profits offered is a rich man. Little craft should stay close to the shore.

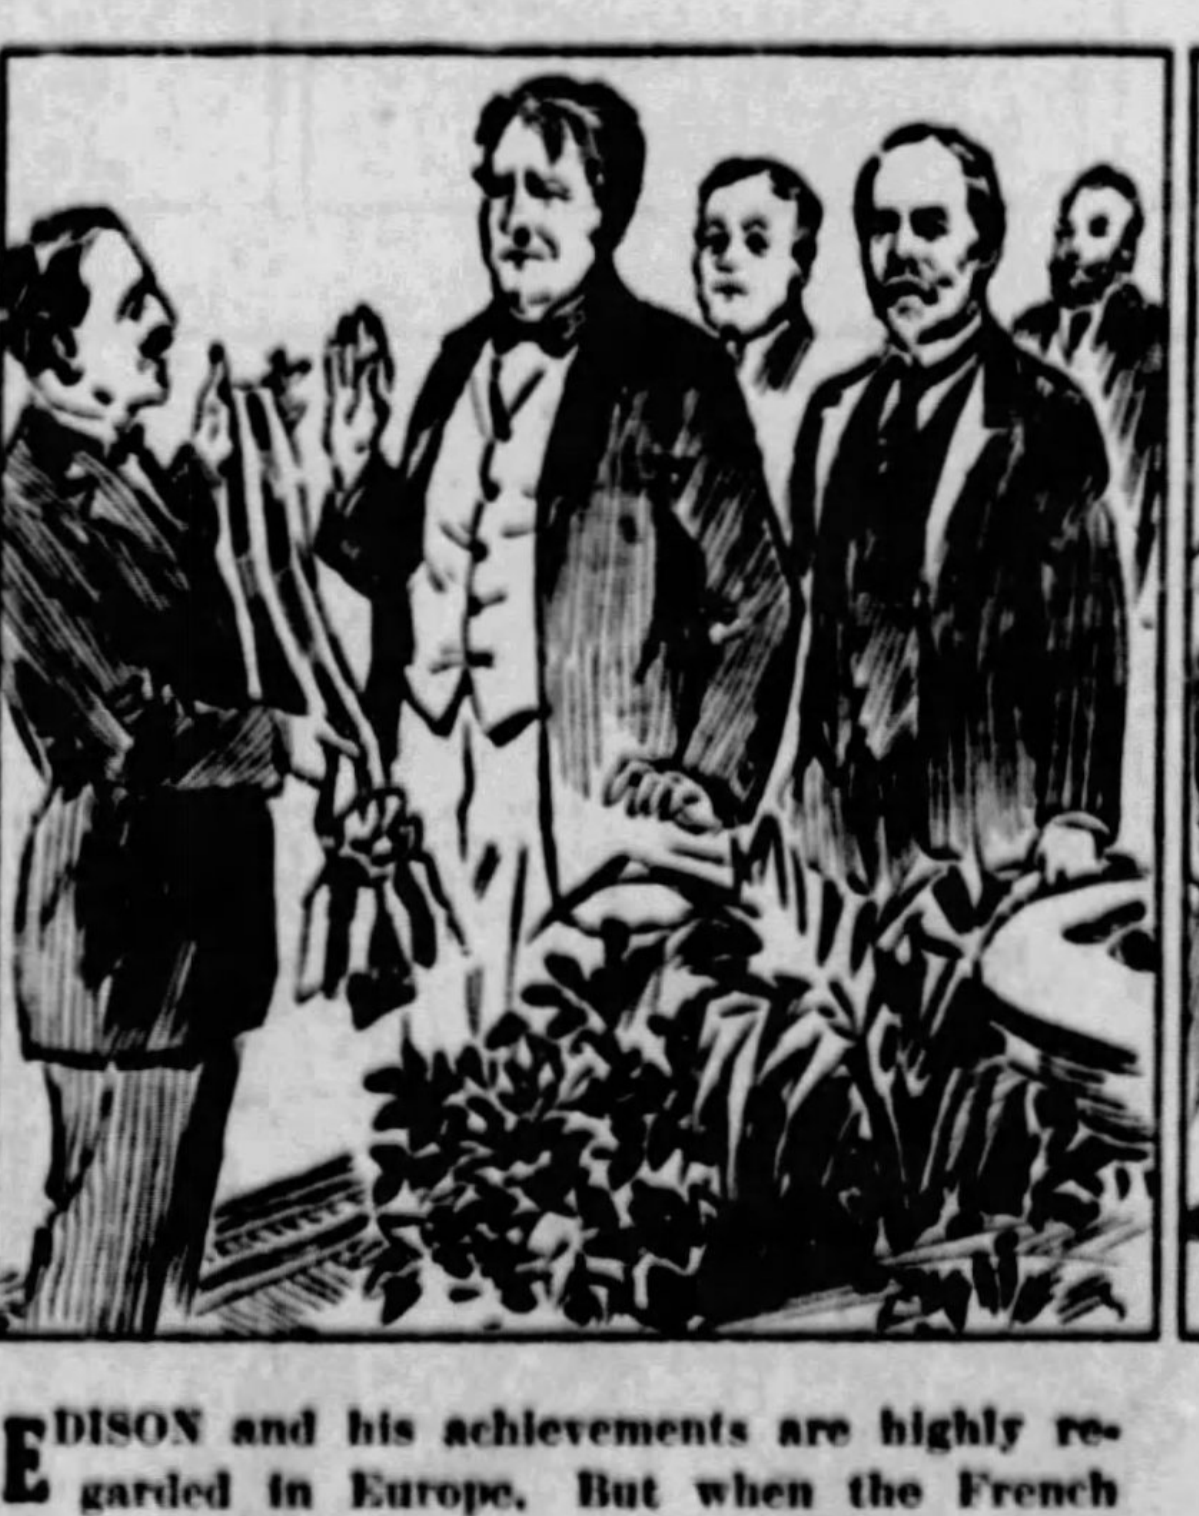
IN 1889 Edison made his second trip to Europe. He visited the Universal Exposition at Paris. President Carnot, of France, lent him his private box at the Paris Opera. As Mr. and Mrs. Edison entered, the orchestra played the Star Spangled Banner and the audience burst into cheers.



EDISON and his achievements are highly regarded in Europe. But when the French Telephone Company offered him a decoration which required that he wear a sash, he flatly refused, saying he couldn't stand that. Whitelaw Reid, American ambassador, was present.

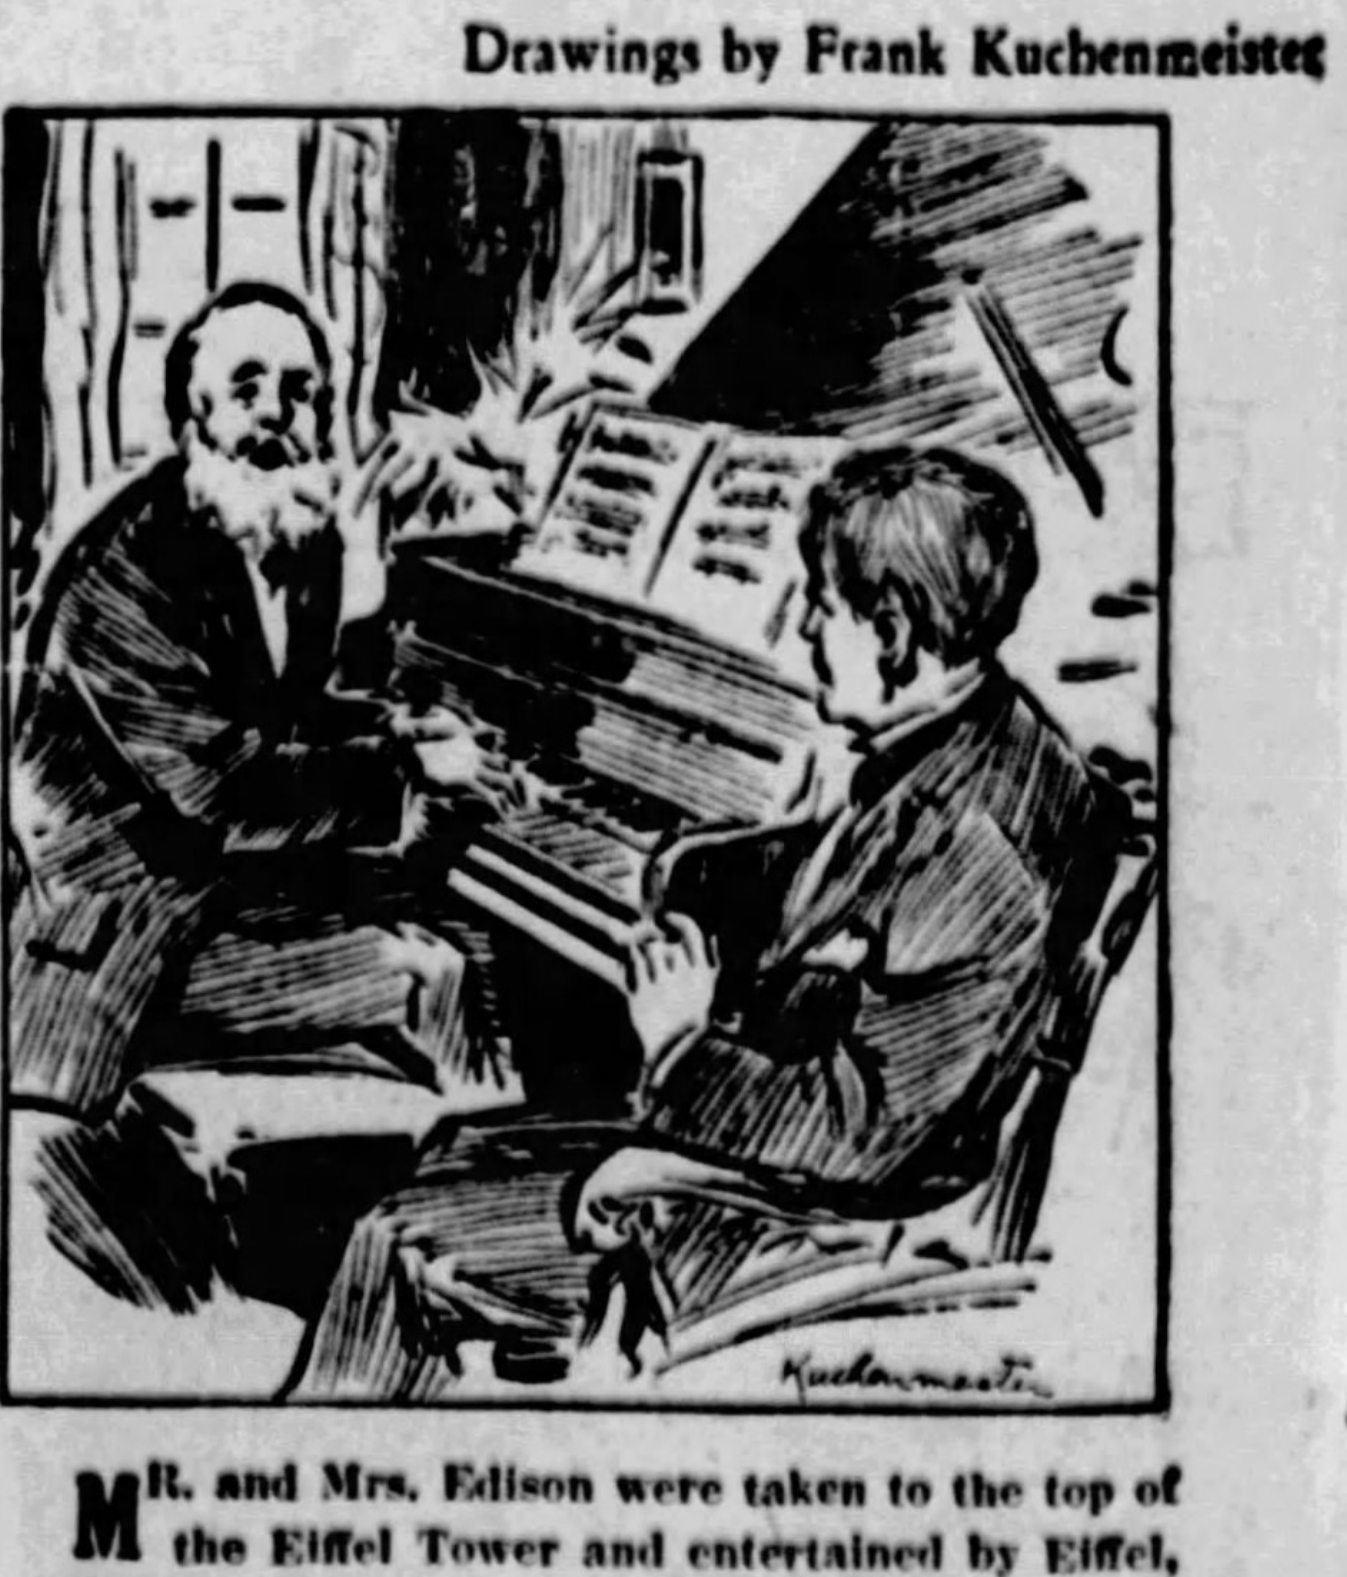
PERSUADED by Mrs. Edison, he did consent to wear the little red button of the Legion of Honor. But whenever he saw any Americans coming he would slip the button into his pocket for fear, as he said at the time, that "they might think he was trying to show off."



MR. and Mrs. Edison were taken to the top of the Eiffel Tower and entertained by Eiffel, the designer, in his private office. There they met the famous French composer, Charles Gounod, who sang and played for them.
